Judge Rejects Curley's Plea, Sends Him to Jail

By FRANK J. REILLY and CASPER T. DORFMAN

WASHINGTON, June 26—Mayor James M. Curley was ordered today to begin serving at once his 6-to-18-month sentence for mail fraud while acting as head of Engineers, Inc. He was denied even a few days to arrange his affairs and was told by Judge James M. Proctor he could take up such matters "with his keepers." The judge, to whom a motion for sus pension of the sentence had been made on grounds that imprisonment would mean Curley's death, expressed surprise that such a hearing had been asked.

Curley stood up and exclaimed: "You are sentencing me to die. This is the death penalty."

'Death Sentence,' Mayor Says in Plea

WASHINGTON, June 26—In a final but futile appeal after he had been ordered to prison, Mayor James M. Curley arose in the courtroom, which had been cleared of all but his family, court attaches and lawyers, and told Judge James M. Proctor:

I was stricken with diabetes and taken to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda where it was found I had a sugar content of two hundred and forty and gall stones were removed. Since 1942, I have been under the care of Doctor Joslin for diabetes, taking insulin each day.

In 1945, I suffered the loss of use of my right leg and arm and speech, was anointed and given an hour to live but, thank God, I recovered and despite the case pending against me which was discussed nightly by my opponents without answer from me, I received the largest vote ever received in any contest.

Upon June 10, I was stricken with a blood pressure of 220 and a hemorrhage of the right eye and taken to the Cohasset Hospital, which I left against the advice of the doctor in charge to be here today.

Your Honor, when I appeared before you last, I stated I considered you eminently fair and just. I reiterate that now.

I was the victim of a professional confidence man whose professions of honesty deceived me and others and who in the past week has been sentenced to a five-year term for forgery. I did not profit a penny by my connection with Engineers, Inc. This fact is proven by the auditor for the FBI in his testimony in this court. I never signed the brochure and resigned from the corporation in Dec. 1941, and would have resignedearlier were it not for the fact that in 1941, I was a candidate for mayor and engrossed with that problem.

I have suffered from the humiliation and sickness due to this case more than can be told in mere words. The tragedy of holding public office lies in the fact that few men ever live long enough to witness fruition of their life work, and rarely is one permitted to read his own obituary. Mine is here in the more than one hundred thousand signatures of citizens of Boston where I was born and which has sent me to high public offices for nearly half a century.

It is further emphasized by the letters from the leading citizens of Boston, representing all races and creeds, attesting their faith in me and their belief that I have been punished sufficiently.

I seek the opportunity to serve my city with its problems of reconversion and reconstruction and outgrowth of the war and the heritage of all American municipalities. Boston under my administration lies first in public health among American cities with the largest municipal hospitals in the world built entirely under my direction. With 10 clearing houses for human ills made possible by a Boston citizen who gave $5,000,000 of downtown realty where the sick receive advice and treatment

His wife, Mrs. Gertrude Curley, who had collapsed during an hour's wait for court to convene, was weeping. Crying, too, was his daughter, Mary Curley Donnelly.

Judge Proctor came in after a long lobby conference with defense and government attorneys. He listened to Atty. William E. Leahy pleaded for suspension of the sentence, then said

"I have made up my mind. I regard this case as closed so far as the court is concerned. I was surprised when it was indicated to me that a formal court hearing was desired in this matter."

Newspapermen started for the door. Judge Proctor shouted: "No one leaves. The marshal is ordered to take into custody anyone who disobeys that order."

Regarding a plea by Leahy for suspension of the sentence, the jurist said:

"The court is of the opinion that the ends of justice and the public interest would be poorly served by such action. The case has been pending many years. The defendant has been ably represented. He has had a fair trial. He has lost."

Judge Proctor ordered the mayor to begin serving time immediately.

He had ordered the courtroom cleared of all persons except Curley, his family, the attorneys and court attaches. Even newspapermen were ordered out.

Atty. Leahy asked that Curley be permitted to address the court. Judge Proctor replied:

"No good purpose would be served by any further statements to the court. I have most carefully considered this motion. I have reached a conclusion. I think there is nothing further to say at this time."

Then the grim, gray-faced mayor heard an echo of his past. Judge Proctor began by expressing regret for Curley's ill health but sharply added:

"That fact cannot justify relieving him of all punishment. The court notes the defendant was convicted in 1903 of conspiracy to commit an offense against the United States by impersonating another in the taking of a Civil Service examinations."

Probation, Judge Proctor observed, may not be granted to a person who has been convicted twice for a felony. As for clemency, he said, it was not within his province but was a prerogative of the executive department of government.

"This court," he said, "will not attempt, under the guise of judicial action, to usurp a power which does not belong to it."

Curley, half an hour before, while waiting for the judge to appear, had reached a state so near collapse that he was led out to an anteroom by Dr. John H. Cauley, Boston health commissioner, and Nurse Helen Kensica, who gave him emergency treatment.

His facial muscles tensed and

Sentence Climaxes Years of Litigation

The mail fraud case in which Mayor Curley was committed to jail today took nearly four years to reach court. The trial was delayed several times by Curley's illnesses, and consumed weeks of testimony when it finally got under way. Curley finally was convicted on Jan. 18, 1946, sentenced pronounced just a month later.

Since that time the case has been involved in appeals and counter appeals. Defense attorneys petitioned the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to reverse the lower court's decision, contending the mayor was the victim of circumstantial evidence.

"In justice to Curley," the attorneys urged, "there can be no other conclusion than that speculation occupied the place of deliberation and conviction did not flow from the pure course of the criminal law."

The appeals court, on a 2-to-1 decision, declined last Jan. 13 to overrule the district court. A plea went to the appeals court on Jan. 29 to reconsider its refusal to set aside the conviction. This was denied without opinion a few days later.

Curley's attorneys then petitioned the Supreme Court to review findings of the lower courts. The high court rejected the petition last June 2. A seceond plea for review was filed June 13 and again rejected on June 16.

Curley's half a century in city, State and national politics first saw him aspiring to office in the late 90's and winning the first of his many elections when he served a 1900-1901 term in the common council.

For a while his star was in steady ascendancy. He stepped into the legislature upon completion of his council term, serving in the House in 1902 and 1903. Then he ran for municipal office again and was a member of the board of aldermen, 1904-1909.

Next came a 1910-1911 term in the City Council and Curley was ready for a fling at national politics. He served two terms in Congress, 1911-1914, meanwhile aiming his sights on Boston's mayoralty. He made it, serving as mayor in a 1914-1918 tenure.

He met his first defeat at the polls since winning an office when Andrew Peters bested him for mayor at the next election. Curley came back, however, and won the

Tears Fall at City Hall; Move for Successor

News that Mayor Curley must serve his prison term was received at City Hall by stunned and bewildered municipal employes some of whom, in the mayor's office wept openly.

City Clerk John B. Hynes, mentioned as the man expected eventually to fill the vacant executive chair, said.

"I am very sorry for him and his family and I'm sorry for the city of Boston. I think that at this stage of his life that it is too bad he had to suffer this ignominy."

At the State House Rep. John H. Carroll went into conference with Gov. Bradford shortly after word was received from Washington. He requested that the governor allow members of the General Court elected from Boston be given a chance to see his message before it is given to the Legislature.

Carroll explained that he was interested in seeing that the man appointed to the mayoralty be given sufficient protection.

He pointed out that John B. Hynes holds his position as city clerk at the pleasure of the city council and said further that this could be held as a club over his head if he were appointed and should later want his position as clerk back.

Bertha Pleads Guilty to Cote Killing, Gets 3½ to 6 Years

By STEVE O'LEARY and ALAN FRAZER

PLYMOUTH, June 26—Mrs. Bertha E. Cote pleaded guilty to manslaughter today and was sentenced by Judge Felix Forte to three-and-a-half to six years in the Women's Reformatory at Framingham. Her plea and sentence came in a dramatic and sensational move that brought an abrupt end to the 10th day of her murder trial for the bludgeon-slaying of her husband, Rene, in their Brockton apartment last Dec. 28. In a courtroom of hushed excitement in which she once cried out in hysteria, "My baby, oh, my baby," the attractive widowed mother's surprise plea definitely established for the first time some important facts. It revealed that she, and she alone—except for her baby—was in the murder apartment the morning Rene Cote was slugged to death last Dec. 28.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Forte remarked:

"I am not unmindful of the one who suffers most and that is the child."

Mrs. Cote's daughter, Barbara Ann, is 5. Court officials said the widow would be eligible for parole in 28 months, two-thirds of her minimum sentence.

It exonerated again Walter E. Steele, the Brockton garage mechanic Mrs. Cote had accused as her secret lover and her husband's slayer, of any complicity in the crime.

It brought an eloquent plea for mercy from her counsel, Atty. Eben G. Townes, in which he admitted he knew nothing of the damaging admissions she had made to Brockton Police Lt. D. Edward Sullivan, the staae's star witness and one of the last to testify.

It caused the prosecutor, Asst. Dist. Atty. John R. Wheatley to disclose police did not know the exact details of the murder, and that "until last night we did not know definitely from the lips of the defendant that Walter Steele was not in the Cote apartment that morning.

It answered the mystery and conjecture that followed interjection of the name of Mrs. Cote's brother, James Surprise, into testimony, when Atty. Townes told Judge Forte, that "whatever the world may think . . . he was not involved and had no more to do with the murder than I did."

Townes later told newsmen "the world says James Surprise is mixed up in it just because he once gave Cote a damn good licking that he had coming to him."

Bertha Cote's sudden admission of guilt came at the very outset of court. She had arrived at the historic red-brick courthouse earlier than usual. She was wearing plastic-rimmed glasses for the first time and was garbed in a new summer dress or black apple print, with a princess style button front and short capped sleeves.

But her eyes were red and swollen from a night of crying and tears welled at the lids. She appeared different in dress, different in demeanor than at any time since the trial started.

Dazedly, she heard Prosecutor Wheatley, who later asked that she serve a 12 to 20-year term, inform Judge Forte and the 14-man jury that he understood the defendant had agreed to plead guilty to so much of the indictment as charged manslaughter.

To this plea, Wheatley added, the Commonwealth had agreed. All eyes in the crowded courtroom focused on the petite, pathetic-appearing defendant when Clerk of Courts George C. P. Olsson called her name and asked how she pleaded to manslaughter.

Bertha Cote had just settled back into her chair after a whispered conference with her attorney. She only half rose from her seat.

"Guilty," she answered in a voice breaking with emotion.

There was a stir in the courtroom, packed with women spectators, when she pleaded guilty. Deputy sheriffs rapped for silence. The atmosphere was tense as Atty. Townes began a plea for mercy from the court.

Her eyes welled with tears when Townes mentioned the name of her brother, James Surprise.

"Whatever the world may think —and there will be criticism made —there might be inferences made from the outside that James Surprise was involved. He had no

Townes in Stirring Appeal for Leniency

PLYMOUTH, June 26—All the questions to the Cote murder mystery were answered today after the trial halted abruptly when the widow pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

Through an eloquent plea for leniency by her counsel, Atty. Eben G. Townes, the strife and turmoil of her life were stressed. Townes called Cote's domination of her life a "fiendish theory" in which he maintained the control of master by taking her baby away from her whenever they had differences. He also told of the many beatings he had administered to her.

In Asst. Dist. Atty. John R. Wheatley's recommendations for sentence he gave answers to many of the questions that have been asked time and again since Cote's body was found bludgeoned to death.

After Mrs. Cote pleaded guilty this morning, Atty Townes addressed the court first.

His remarks follow:

"As your honor well knows, I made last night the most momentous decision that ever confronted me. I have perhaps wishfully thought that I had a chance with my client for success with this jury. Now throughout the night I talked with Bertha E. Cote and I left it up to her whether she would gamble on a chance of a murder conviction.

"I left it up to Bertha Cote to make that decision.

"I had no right to gamble with a girl's life. Bertha Cote made that decision for herself alone.

"Whatever the world may think, whatever the result of this decision may fall on me, or react against me, I repeat again, Your Honor, that the decision was made by the defendant.

"Now this girl's brother, James Surprise, has been mentioned in testimony. He had no more to

Green Snubs Pleas For General Strike Against Labor Bill

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—AFL President William Green today rejected pleas from member unions for a general strike in protest against the new Taft-Hartley labor union control law.

Meanwhile steel mills and railroads, feeling the effects of the four-day-old coal stoppage began to lay off workers as wildcat walkouts by the nation's miners appeared to gain momentum.

Some of the 222,000 idle miners said they were jumping the gun on the 10-day mine vacation which starts at midnight tomorrow. But the majority were walking out in bitter protest against the Hartley-Taft law.

Green called presidents of the AFL's 105 unions to a conference in Washington July 9. He told reporters, after an emergency meeting with resident members of the AFL's executive council, he thought it "unwise and inadvisable" to bow to telegrams and letters from unions throughout the nation asking for a general strike.

"Instead, we are going to fight the measure in the courts and seek to maintain our rights under the bill in negotiations with employers," Green said.

Passage of the new law, enacted over President Truman's veto, has "amphasized" the need for unity of all labor, the 74-year-old AFL president said.

The expressed opinion its passage has hastened moves toward merger of the CIO and AFL, adding that further meetings on consolidation of the two big labor groups possibly would be held in the near future—although none is scheduled at the moment.

The July 9 conference of AFL presidents will consider a program to deal with the Taft-Hartley bill and the international officers and attorneys will explain to the various union heads how the new act affects them.

Shipbuilding Doom Seen in U. S. Strike

Predicting the extinction of the American ship industry while the rest of the world is participating in a boom, the Bethlehem Steel Co., owners of nine of ten Atlantic coast strike-bound yards, called for reconsideration on the part of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO), who called 40,000 repair and construction workers out on strike today.

In the meantime pickets, drawn from 5000 workers from two East Boston yards and the Fore River plant of Bethlehem, were thrown around the three yards in strong but orderly lines. Maintenance and security staffs were not interfered with and there was no attempt to involve the big Boston Naval Shipyard in Charlestown or its South Boston annex.

Joseph M. Larkin, vice president in charge of industrial relations for the Bethlehem Steel Co., in a statement released locally said that by the end of this year there would be no ships on ways in American yards and none on order.

He added there is a world boom in shipbuilding, with 1000 ships building or on order in British yards alone. The plight of American yards he blamed on high costs which he laid directly to high wages.

Larkin claimed shipbuilding workers are the highest paid in the manufacturing field, the average hourly earnings for all yards in the country reaching $1.42, with the Bethlehem average above $1.53.

John McGonagle, national representative, visiting with officials of Locals 25 and 5 in the Greater Boston area, forecast that the strike would be of long duration.

Truman Vetoes Wool Tarrif Bill as 'Error'

WASHINGTON, June 26 (INS)—President Truman today sent his third successive veto to Congress when he declined to approve the wool tariff bill.

He declared the measure sought to raise tariff barriers in defiance of the government's co-operation with the United Nations to reduce trade restrictions.

In a special message to the Senate, accompanying his veto, he said:

"It would be a blow to our leadership in world affairs.

"Enactment of a law providing for additional barriers to the importation of wool at the very moment when this government is taking the leading part in a United Nations conference at Geneva called for the purpose of reducing trade barriers . . . would be a tragic mistake."

The President said the wool growers of this country were entitled to receive support, but maintained there was ample time for Congress to pass legislation "consistent with out international responsibility and the interests of our economy as a whole."

$17,000,000 Tax Program Ok'd

Salem Girl Kidnaped At Gunpoint, Beaten

A young Salem girl was kidnaped from her escort only 200 yards from her home today and then beaten unconscious by an enraged abductor when he found he had driven down a one-way street to the ocean's edge.

Miss Mary Kay Olney, 21, of Clifton ave., Salem, tore and scratched the kidnaper during a furious battle, but was critically injured in fighting off his attempted attack. She suffered a fractured jaw and shoulder and possible brain concussion.

The injured girl was being driven home by Karl Kirchner, 31, MIT junior, of Beacon st., Back Bay, when they stopped at the edge of Forest River Park, part of Pioneer Village.

A moment after the couple parked, a machine of the same make as Kirchner's drove up and a youth about 20 jumped out, holding his hand in his pocket as if he were holding a gun.

According to police, he ordered the couple out of the car, saying: "I've got a gun. I'll finish you if you don't get out."

When Kirchner made a move to struggle, the youth threatened him again and commented: "I'll fry anyway if they catch me."

Then indicating his parked car, he is quoted as saying: "There's my car. I'm hot and that car is hot. I want to get out of this place and this is an out-of-state car."

Kirchner was driving a car registered in New York State.

The kidnaper then forced the Olney girl into the back seat and drove off. Kirchner jumped into the other vehicle, in which the keys were left in the ignition, but was unable to start it

He jumped out and ran to the Burns home, where he gave the alarm. Meanwhile, Miss Olney was scratching and clawing her abductor as he drove through Forest River Park. Her struggles sent the car careening along the road, sideswiping several trees.

Unfamiliar with the road, the youth soon found he was at a dead end, right at the water's edge. He pulled her from the machine and commenced beating her.

Patrolmen Thomas Hill and Ted Olbryuch raced to the scene and from a distance saw the couple struggling. As their headlights picked up the pair, the kidnaper felled his victim with one more punch and dashed into the woods that run along the beach.

Miss Olney graduated from the Katharine Gibbs Secretarial School early this month. She is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Austin L. Olney. Her father is on the faculty of the University of New Hampshire and her parents make their home in Rochester, N. H. She has been living with two aunts, Ruth and Louise Burns.

At the hospital, doctors found chunks of flesh beneath the plucky girl's finger nails. They are certain the man they seek is badly clawed and may have to seek medical aid.

He was described as five feet seven inches. He has a crew haircut and wore a V-neck sweater.

Police returned to the kidnap scene, where they found the machine the youth abandoned.

Lt. William H. O'Neil of the Salem police obtained three sets of fingerprints, and a check disclosed that the automobile belongs to a Salem youth, a member of one of the city's most prominent families.

Special to Boston Evening American

SANTA ANA, Cal., June 26—I cannot believe this the same courtroom I left a few days ago.

Now this is a murder trial.

People's exhibit No. 5, a cellophane package filled with holiday trousers which the prosecution claims were stained with the blood of a man and woman foully done to death.

Legal wrangling that means business, objections exploding from the defense table which never lets a question go by without throwing the book at it.

The effect upon the defendants, Bud Gollum and Louise Overell, is evident, remarkable.

Before today we have seen them in two stages, two roles.

In the opening day of the trial, expressionless, immobile, frozen in their seats, scarcely looking at each other.

Came the day of jury selection and they relaxed into jollity, they ran about the court room, had their pictures taken with much laughter on their faces, whispered together like young lovers at a picnic.

This wasn't so bad!

Why, for goodness sakes, was this all there was to it?

Once in a while they winced away from a question about the death penalty but released from the first pressure, from stage fright, they went up like big balloons, while Mr. Jacobs had the floor most of the time and Mr. Williams was little in evidence.

Lust. Greed. Frustration.

The words still echo in the courtroom, the three words pronounced by Eugene Williams as the motives he will prove caused them to strike down Louise's father and mother.

Lust, Greed, Frustration.

You keep hearing them.

Big words which none of us will forget while the trial goes on.

Behind Bud Gollum and Louise Overell now sit witnesses waiting to testify to the case outlined by the prosecution.

In front of them the jury which in time will vote guilty or not guilty or disagree.

For 20 minutes Louise Overell sits sideways, staring at the closed door of the judge's chambers behind which a conference is going on. Her back is turned squarely to Gollum.

Upon her face is a look almost of bewilderment. The smiles and laughter have died.

For the first time it seems to have been impressed upon her that she is on trial for murder.

We start, in testimony of a thin, slow young man in a plaid shirt, a mechanic, the last pitiful cruise of the pleasure yacht called the Mary E.

At the wheel is Walter Overell.

Aboard are Mrs. Beulah Overell, her daughter, Louise, and her daughter's boy-friend, Bud Gollum.

Under the impact of those memories, Louise Overell grows grey-white and Bud Gollum wets his lips over and over again. What their memories are we do not know, we cannot say.

Maybe innocent ones of sorrow and sadness for such happy Sundays that are gone.

Maybe hideous ones of the scenes in the cabin in which the prosecution says the girl's father and mother were beaten to death

The cruise stops as the defense wheels its biggest gun into place and wins a legal victory as Judge Kenneth Morrison rules that the prosecution must establish the corpus delicti before it proceeds further with its chronological case against Gollum and Overell.

The sensational defense victory brought about by an objection of William Pierne, counsel for Gollum, does not seem to lighten the worn and weary greyness which must come upon defendants as the prosecution makes its case, whether they be innocent or guilty.

Juror Beating May Lead to Panel Lockup

SANTA ANA, Cal., June 26 (AP)—A startling report of a threat to a juror had the courtroom in the Overell yacht murder trial still buzzing today.

A woman juror complained to Newport Beach police that an unidentified man entered her apartment, struck her and threatened more harm if she voted to convict Louise Overell, 18, and her lover, George Gollum, 21, of murdering the girl defendant's parents. The jury has not been locked up.

Trial Judge Kenneth E. Morrison took no official cognizance of the alleged attack, insofar as any courtroom statement was concerned. He conferred in his chambers with the juror, Mrs. Uvon Putnam, wife of a Newport Beach carpenter, both before and after yesterday's session of the trial. He declined comment on the incident.

Lawyers said they had agreed on the advisability of the jury being locked up, under guard, for the remainder of the trial, which may last another nine weeks.

Eugene Williams, special prosecutor for the Attorney-General, said that "obviously no one but a person who desired the defendants to be acquitted would have made threats" against the juror.

He said he believed the threats to be the work of an irresponsible person "but it does emphasize the desirability of guarding the jury."

William Bierne, associate counsel for Gollum, 21-year-old premedical student, charged that public disclosure of the alleged threat was for the "purpose of prejudicing the defendants' case."

After Judge Morrison held that the deaths and the criminal agency must be first established, Coroner Earl Abbey testified that he had seen the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Overell aboard the Coast Guard boat that took them from the wreckage of their yacht.

Prosecutor Williams charged in his opening statement that Louise and her lover beat her parents to death, then set a dynamite charge to destroy evidence of crime, because the Overells opposed her contemplated marriage and had threatened to disinherit her from their $600,000 estate.

Squealer in Siegal Killing Fails to Show

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 26 (AP)—From out of the underworld, no squealer came forth today to finger the slayer of Benjamin (Bugsy) Siegel, and so in simple police routine his gangland slaying was entered into criminal mystery records as having been committed by "person or persons unknown."

Following an inquest, at which the last three persons to see the gambler and former public enemy alive presented authorities with few clues, his brother, Dr. Maurice Siegel, stepped forward to claim the body.

Principal witness was Allen Smiley, tall, white-haired associate of the dapper gambler, whose life was blasted out by an assassin's rifle bullets last Friday night as he sat reading a newspaper on a divan in the home of Virginia Hill, thrice-wed Alabama heiress, now in Paris.

Smiley, who sat on the same divan and whose coatsleeve was pierced by one of the bullets, testified the shooting occurred shortly after he and Siegel returned to the house from a dinner party with Miss Hill's brother, Charles, and her secretary, Miss Jeri Mason.

"Suddenly there was a noise," said Smiley. "I looked up quickly and thought it was a bunch of firecrackers. For a second, I thought it might be a gag.

"I looked up at Ben's face and saw blood all over it, so I instinctively fell on the floor for my own protection."

Hill and Miss Mason testified that in response to Smiley's call to them upstairs, they turned out the lights and called the police and a doctor.

Bradford Sees N. E. Fuel Shortage

Gov. Bradford disclosed today there was a shortage of coal and oil in New England, which "may be approaching the critical stage."

The Governor said he had called a conference next Monday with an advisory fuel committee to discuss what plans the State may take to avert a serious situation.

He told a news conference he did not wish to be an "alarmist," but added, "Unless conditions improve we may be troubled this fall with a shortage of number 2 fuel oil." That is the grade used in operation of home furnaces.

Woman Held on Murder In Lynn Officer's Death

Mrs. Sally Evelyn DiTamaso, 26, of Lynn, blonde mother of two children, today faced a murder charge in the killing of her schooldays sweetheart, Capt. John D. Quinn, at Brandenburg, Ky.

Quinn, who lives in Marianna st., Lynn, was fatally stabbed in a cabin in which the couple had lived for nearly a year while the victim had been stationed at Fort Knox.

Capt. John D. Quinn

The pretty, young mother told authorities that Quinn died accidentally when he stumbled into a knife she was holding for protection.

She collapsed on learning that Quinn was dead and fell upon his body as military police carried it out, crying out: "I loved him more than anything in the world."

The victim was a wounded veteran of several European campaigns in World War II and was on leave from Fort Knox preparatory to being sent overseas again.

Mrs. DiTamaso is the estranged wife of Raymond DiTamaso who lives only a few houses from Mr. and Mrs. John H. Quinn, parents of Capt. Quinn. With Mrs. DiTamaso were her children David, 7, and John, 4. She said one of them was born of her present marriage and one to a divorced husband.

The tragic ending to what began years ago as a schoolboy romance, came as the climax to a night of drinking and quarreling, according to the story she told police.

Mrs. DiTamaso said she had been living with Quinn in Kentucky since last August. On Tuesday evening, she said, she and Quinn had words over money matters and about the name and address of another woman she had found in one of his pockets.

She said she left the cabin and went to a Muldraugh tavern, followed by Quinn. There they drank together, and the quarrel started all over again.

She left him at the tavern, she said, and returned to the cabin about 10:30 p. m. Quinn returned shortly after midnight.

"I didn't want to let him in because he was drinking," she told police. "When he did come in, I grabbed a butcher knife to keep him away from me.

"I was holding the knife straight in front of me when he came toward me, stumbled, and fell on the point."

The knife pierced Quinn's heart. Mrs. DiTamaso called state police who notified the military authorities at Ft. Knox.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., June 26 (AP)—Sheriff's deputies today searched for three youthful Negroes who raped a 15-year-old girl who swam for 10 minutes in a darkened flooded gravel pit in a fruitless effort to escape them.

Sheriff F. Scott Burke of Macomb County said the girl was parked in an auto near the quarry with another 15-year-old girl and two youths when the trio approached early today. The assailants bludgeoned the youth into unconsciousness as the girls fled from the auto into the darkness and plunged into the water.

Red Strikers Seek Ramadier Ousting

PARIS, June 26 (INS)—Two major strike developments on the eve of the Anglo-Soviet-French economic talks tomorrow made it increasingly clear today that French Communists are out to break the back of the Ramadier government.

The Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor announced its support of the strike of virtually all of France's 200,000 coal miners as the nation began feeling the impact of the walkouts.

The National Federation of Steel Workers called a 24-hour work-stoppage for July 1 to protest the government's higher tax program, which also was partly responsible for the coal walkouts. The miners also are demanding increased food rations.

Russian Recipe For U. S. Peace

LONDON, June 26 (INS)—A Soviet radio commentator warned today that "a policy of U. S. cooperation with the great peace-loving nations, including Russia" is one of two things necessary to "protect American youth from another war."

The commentator said the other war-preventative is "honest and equal participation in the UN."

American "monopolists" were blamed for World Wars I and II by the commentator who charged them with "openly dictating their will in politics." Brus claimed that American reactionaries "nurtured and supported" monopolies with their war-accumulated "wealth and power."

Curley

locked when he heard Judge Proctor pronounce his doom, but the jurist relented to the point of withdrawing objection to Curley addressing the court. Then some of the mayor's old fire came back.

He stood up, his eyes upon the jurist for several seconds, then the Curley oratory of old poured forth:

"I make this appeal as Portia made it in the Merchant Venice . . . the quality of mercy is not strained . . . it falleth like the gentle rains from heavens . . . it is twice blessed . . . it blesses him who gives and him who receives . . . it is mighty amongst the mightiest . . . it becomes the throned monarch better than his crown.

"Here I stand before you, an old man . . . broken in spirit . . . broken in health . . . I am not a beggar. I am not asking for mercy by a penny . . . This is not the end . . . I will return some day."

Judge Proctor's expression did not soften. Deputy U. S. marshals appeared at the mayor's side. His wife, daughter and two sons, George and Leo, arose. Curley straightened and held his head high as he was led away, his family flanking him.

He was taken into an elevator and to the courthouse basement. On the way he nodded to several friends in the corridor. Then he was escorted into the U. S. marshal's office to await the last dismal whir of the machinery speeding him to a cell.

His family was allowed to remain with him until he should be taken away. The prison to which he would go was not disclosed, and will not be made public, according to custom, until he is within its walls.

He will not be allowed time of for god behavior; the minimum sentence of six months must be served in all cases where the minimum is under one year. Under local procedure the judge does not designate the prison.

Saddened as was his family, it clung to one dim ray of hope—presidential clemency. Curley was no sooner on his way to the marshal's office than several of his friends were headed for the White House, intent on seeing President Truman and pleading for him to save the mayor from prison.

Atty. Leahy had sought Judge Proctor's approval of a suspended sentence on the basis of nine affidavits attesting to Curley's physical condition, seven signed by physicians. he lawyer also called to the court's attention the hundreds of letters on the mayor's behalf.

Among the letters presented to the court was one written by Archbishop Cushing, who, addressing it "To Whom It May Concern," declared he was appealing for mercy for "this sick and aged man" just as in the course of his clerical life he had appealed for mercy for hundreds of other unfortunates in trouble.

Leahy told the court, after listing Curley's infirmities, including image:

"These are undeniable and indisputable facts, medical facts which cannot be disputed, and, when found in a man of his years, indicate approaching fatal determination. He could have remained at Cohasset Hospital. He came here against doctors' orders."

free, thanks to the foresight of my service as mayor.

Every recreation and bathing facility with the exception of two were made possible by me as mayor. It has been truly said that a man is best known by his neighbors and my neighbors have been the under-privileged, they have faith in me as attested by the thousands of letters containing prayers and good wishes.

In the opinion of the medical men that have treated me, a jail sentence at my age and present physical condition is a speedy sentence of death.

I submit, your honor, that I have been punished sufficiently for the offense charged and that in the name o justice and humanity I be permitted to return to my amily, four of whom have

BELTONE NEW ENGLAND

93 EDDY ST., PROVIDENCE
56 NO. MAIN ST., FALL RIVER

I make this appeal as Portia made it in "The Merchant of Venice," to what I consider a just and considerate judge.

"The quality of mercy is not strained, It falleth like the gentle rain from Heaven; it is twice blessed, it blesseth him who gives and him who receives, it is mighty amongst the mightiest, It becomes the throned monarch better than his crown."

My record in the public service in a period of nearly half a century, has been one of accomplishment—"Curley gets things done," was the by-word in my career.

I have tried at all times to render faithful service to the people who have made it possible for me to gain the great honors that have come to me.

Now at a time when postwar problems, financial and otherwise rest as a heavy burden on nearly every political subdivision in America, I feel the experience I have gained during a life time in the public service can be really utilized to carry out the public duties of my position of mayor of Boston, to which I was elected by the people of the city of my birth, the people who know my faults as well as my attributes and who, a little over a year ago, gave me the greatest vote I ever received.

Does the United States government demand that I be sent to jail in the closing days of my life—73 years old next November—an old man, sick, with not a great many days left in my earthly span?

What will be accomplished? [illegible] Navy.

I have been branded as it were by the stigma of this trial.

The blemish is upon me, my family has been humiliated and embarrassed by the publicity and the ordeal incident to this long court procedure.

Does the government of the United States demand that the penalty be more than this? Haven't I paid the price already?

Here I stand before you, an old man, broken in spirit, broken in health.

No one could find fault with your disposition of the case if you ordered probation that I may spend my few remaining days as I started life in the service of my fellow man.

During my long career, I have brought sunshine into the lives of thousands. I have comforted the broken in spirit as a public servant.

I have built up one of the greatest institutions in America, the Boston City Hospital, that the sick and dying might have comfort and medical help in their last days. Little did I think that at this stage of my career, I would be asking one who has been placed in the judgment seat by the law of this land to be merciful to me in my crisis.

I am not a "public enemy."

I am the friend of the people.

The people of my home city and state know me.

Could I for half a century have fooled them, or on the other hand, does the record speak for itself?

They have elected me year [illegible] Surely they knew what they wanted.

Isn't this problem that you have to decide here, Your Honor, what is best for the public welfare in the disposition of this case?

How can the greatest good be brought out of this chaos?

You would not be vested with the authority under the law to suspend sentences or give probation if the Congress of the United States that created this law as well as others did not foresee that on occasion cases would arise when leniency should be shown, rather than a jail penalty be imposed.

I have been a member of Congress.

I have helped to pass laws that govern the people of America.

As a lawmaker I know that at this time you are supreme, everything is in your hands.

You will have the final say. "Will the public welfare only be served by my incarceration or will the public welfare be served by my probation?" This is not the end. I will return some day.

office again, serving from 1922 to 1926.

He won it again for a 1930-1934 term, then landed the governorship, reigning on Beacon Hill during 1935 and 1936.

Meanwhile he had become known as the "original" Roosevelt man in Massachusetts, a status which was destined to be forgotten when he broke with the White House.

Curley had trounced Gaspar Bacon for the governorship in the 1934 campaign, but now it was his turn to meet a series of setbacks. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., defeated him for U. S. senator and later, in 1937, Maurice Tobin won the mayoral nomination from him. Leverett Saltonstall next beat him for the governorship and Tobin defeated him a second time as mayor.

It appeared to be the end of Curley's political life, but he summoned his following and won a congressional seat against Thomas Eliot in the 11th district, taking time out next to win his present post as mayor, defeating John E. Kerrigan and the then Fire Comr. William Arthur Reilly.

Woman Guilty Of Torturing Boy

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., June 26 (AP)—Mrs. Agnes Smith, 47, pleaded guilty to a charge of third degree assault after a seven-year-old boy accused her of using pliers and a knife on his tongue to extort an admission concerning a baseball bat.

Peace Justice Fred Strunk, who set sentencing for July 2, said Mrs. Smith had admitted seizing Richard Griffin's tongue with pliers but had denied cutting him with a knife. She merely rested the knife on his tongue she told Strunk.

The child, son of a truck driver who boarded his four children with Mrs. Smith because of a housing shortage, sustained tongue injuries which required medical treatment. He said Mrs. Smith accused him of misplacing a bat.

Asks More Alimony

LOS ANGELES, June 26 (AP)—Mrs. Antoinette Michel Schipa has asked superior court to order her former husband, Tito Schipa, operatic tenor, to increase her alimony because of the decline in value of the Italian lira.

Mrs. Schipa, now living in Italy, said a properly agreement provided her with the equivalent of about $700, but her income has dropped with the lira and she asked alimony be set at $1000 a month, American money.

U. S. Occupation of Germany, Though Faulty, Is Still Best

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Dean of American Foreign Correspondents
Written Expressly for the Hearst Newspapers

FRANKFURT, June 26—Of the four occupation zones in Germany, the American area is by far the best and most efficiently organized. In administration on a military basis, Gen. Lucius D. Clay and his command have done a good job.

The fundamental error and weakness of Anglo-American policy during the last two postwar years has been in keeping up the fiction that we still are at war with Germany and at peace with Soviet Russia.

Civil administration should have been turned over to the Germans more than a year ago, under the supervision and control of the very best of American and British economists.

Military occupation should have been restricted to security.

The Americans are best liked of all the occupation forces, insofar as any foreign occupation army can be liked. Our boys are extremely generous, especially the younger soldiers, and they expend no small part of their pay in giving food, chocolate bars, bread and other things to the hungry little children and young women and often to their parents.

The German girls of today are very "streamlined." Many of them are remarkably attractive despite all they have gone through.

There is an extraordinary bitterness among Germans against the British. That feeling is stronger than against the Russians.

Germans, in their humiliation, have become hyper-sensitive.

The British show of contempt could be interpreted as only unsociability on the part of the English, which attitude sometimes even gets under the Americans' skins.

German industrialists, manufacturers and businessmen say the British military and civil administration is "over-organized."

Although London laments the scarcity of workers and British manpower, the Germans say the British zone is so over-staffed that you can get nothing done.

The ruthless requisitioning of houses by the occupation armies in both the British and American zones has created much bitterness.

This situation is particularly felt in Germany where around half of the nation's homes were destroyed or rendered uninhabitable.

Denunciation as a "Nazi" is the curse of Germany.

"Denazification," as carried out, is one of the best allies of Communism and of Soviet Russia.

Denazification is pursued in the American zone with pedantic rigor that is not equalled in the other zones. Members of the Nazi party must be washed clean before they can follow their former professions, careers or pursuits.

The extensive confiscations ordered by the denazification "mills" contribute to the systematic proletarianization of Germany, and that is smoothing the way for Communism and Soviet Russia.

In the Soviet zone former members of the Nazi party, if they have not been outstanding leaders, are merely asked, "What can you do?" and, if satisfactory answers are given, jobs are provided them.

There is an open invitation to former Nazis, as the Soviets know that Germany's ablest specialists, technicians and workers HAD TO BE MEMBERS of the party.

Among many other grave questions that confront the Germany of tomorrow, and even of today, is the biological problem of the surplus of women. It is estimated that there are between seven and eight million more women than men.

Between the ages of 18 and 38 there are four to five women to each man. The war took a terrible harvest of German men between 20 and 40.

Nature's urge to perpetuate life and the race, together with the natural desire for male companionship, is making a breach in sex morals and laws set up by society and religion as never before in history.

No nation can point the finger of scorn at the Germans in this respect.

"By every word and deed"

By the democratic process which all Americans cherish, the Congress has written a new set of rules for labor-management relations.

The new law which came out of this democratic process is based solidly on the conviction that workers and their employers must work together in the public interest.

But laws alone cannot put the will to cooperate or the desire to understand into the hearts of men.

What is needed to make this new law work for the good of all people is real teamwork between employees and employers, based on sincerity, confidence, and good will. Name-calling, abuse, and bitterness must be forgotten, for they can contribute nothing toward the cause of industrial peace.

For its part, the National Association of Manufacturers calls upon management to show, by every word and deed, that it is determined to work with labor under the new law to build an era of general prosperity such as this country has never known.

Teamwork built America. Teamwork is still the one sure way to better days.

So, let's all roll up our sleeves and go to work—in the public interest.

Cote Trial

more to do with it than I did," the gray-haired defense counsel told Judge Forte. "James Surprise fathered the Surprise family. There were six children. They were humble people."

At this point in the lawyer's plea, the comely 28-year-old widow was crying openly. A few moments later, when Townes spoke about her only child, 5-year-old Barbara Ann, and of the dark prospects that the little girl faced, Bertha Cote broke down completely. Court attaches joined Mrs. Abbie Woodward, the jail matron, in going to her aid. But she was inconsolable in her grief. Judge Forte ordered a recess.

It was obvious even before the start of the 10th day of the murder trial, that an electrifying development was in the making. The defendant arrived at the courthouse earlier than usual. The tortoise-shell glasses she wore for the first time accentuated rather than camouflaged the grim, worn expression on her face.

Then, for the first time, she tried to dodge the photographers. Until today, she has bravely faced the cameras, often courageously forcing the faint trace of a smile. She went directly to the defendant's room on the second floor of the courthouse. She looked neither to right nor left.

After the jury had filed into the courtroom, Mrs. Cote passed through the crowd, her eyes still downcast. Daily, she has bowed to court attendants and smiled to the newspaper writers she knows. Today, she did not lift her head.

Throughout the routine of the formal calling of court—the "Hear ye! Hear ye!" of Court Crier Adnah Harlow, the polling of the jurors by Clerk Olsson—she sat like a woman in a daze. Then she went into huddle of whispers with Atty. Townes before she arose, still holding onto her chair, and pleaded guilty.

Later, when Townes, in his plea for leniency of sentence, had referred to her only child, Barbara Ann, as "the most beautiful baby I ever saw; I'd like to take her to my home," Bertha Cote began to cry loudly and hysterically.

"Oh, my baby!" she screamed.

During the recess called by Judge Forte, Atty. Townes told newsmen that he tried to get his client to make a plea yesterday, but that she had refused.

"I did all I could," Townes said. "I just couldn't gamble with the girl's life. I swear her brother, Jimmy, had nothing to do with it."

Townes' plea for leniency was built on a dramatic story of the trials and tribulations of the attractive defendant from her early childhood. He referred to "the fiendish theory" of her husband, who, he said, imposed his will on her by taking their child away at any time she disagreed with him, and beating her frequently.

East Boston Man Robbed Of $1086 in Maine Holdup

WELLS, Me., June 26—Three young holdup men who took $1090 in jewelry and $86 in cash from Thomas Winston, 45, of Saratoga st., East Boston, were being sought by local and State Police today.

Keep Turning In Your Used Fats

Used cooking fats have represented a substantial part of our total industrial fat supply. The more than 600 million pounds of used fats that American homemakers have saved and turned in since 1942 has been of vital importance. It is a record of which every woman who contributed may well be very proud.

The United States still lacks adequate supplies of fats and oils. And we are particularly short of industrial fats. Many, if not most, of the things we all use and wear require industrial fats, or the products of industrial fats, such as soaps and glycerine, in their manufacture.

So won't you keep up your good work and continue to save and turn in every possible pound of used fat?

Violent Storm Damage Heavy

Moderate southwest winds and hot weather moved into Greater Boston today on the heels of a violent squall and electrical storm which ripped through Milton, Quincy, Dorchester and South Boston.

The storm caught dozens of persons aboard small sailboats in Dorchester Bay and Old Harbor, and one girl and nine men were rescued by Coast Guards and Harbor policemen.

Miss Mary Kane, 18, of Ticknor st., South Boston, was off the South oston Yacht Club in her 12-foot sailboat with John McDonough, 14, of Marine rd., when 40-mile winds struck. The boat overturned and the pair clung to its sides for 10 minutes until rescued by a power boat.

In Dorchester, scores of homes were left in darkness for more than an hour when a bolt struck a transformer in Westmoreland st. Another bolt hit a house in Fairfax st., ripping bricks from the chimney. Milton bore the brunt of the damage. Falling trees blocked traffic on Thatcher st. and Canton, Randolph and Central aves. Damage was extensive along a half-mile path, and much of the town was in darkness for more than an hour until circuits were repaired by Edison emergency crews.

More to Testify Chandler Sane

Additional testimony that Douglas Chandler was sane was due to be offered by psychiatrists for the government in federal court today as the former newspaperman's trial on a treason charge drew near a close.

With only brief testimony expected from the rebuttal witnesses called to refute defense claims Chandler was insane, court attaches said the case may go to the jury by Saturday.

Three well known psychiatrists declared that Chandler was sane and conscious of what he was doing when he broadcast Nazi propaganda from Berlin during the war.

Home Garden Forum

By FOSTER H. WEISS

Head of the Vegetable Gardening Department, Norfolk County Agricultural School

Q—Can peat moss be used to lighten the soil for roses?

A—Roses do fairly well on any soil provided they contain a good supply of organic matter. Work in about 3 inches of peat moss for good results.

Q—Last summer we grew several rows of soy beans. How can they be used?

A—Soy beans do not appeal to most of us as a common vegetable. Suggest you contact your Home Demonstration Agent for leaflet on soy bean uses. For general purposes a copy of green beans or lima beans will give more satisfaction.

Q—Is it too late to replant parsnips?

A—No. If planted now, they will come along fast.

Q—The leaves on some of our rasberry bushes are curled up and small. Will spraying help them?

A—Your trouble seems to be mosaic, a serious disease of raspberries. Suggest you pull up and destroy the diseased plants before it spreads. Spray now with arsenate of lead and nicotine to control insects.

U. S. Aircraft For Americas

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP) Lt. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg said today the United States planned to supply other American nations with aircraft if Congress approves plans for standardizing arms in the western hemisphere.

The deputy commanding general of the Army Air Forces appeared before the House foreign affairs committee in support of legislation to authorize the program.

He made clear it was contemplated that other American nations would pay for some, if not all, of the planes they got.

Vandenberg said that furnishing the planes would accomplish two ends:

1—Keep the American aircraft industry "healthy."

2—Co-ordinate the Americas' aerial defense against attack.

Baruch Discounts Immediate War

WASHINGTON, June 26 (INS)—Presidential Adviser Bernard M. Baruch today said he could see no war with Russia as an immediate threat.

The noted financier told graduates of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces that "we face a future that is unrestful, not not alarming." He said:

"With others of my countrymen, I feel deep irritations, but I do not fear explosions."

Baruch accused Russia of waging a "cold war" against the United States. Referring to this phase, he said:

"But in the cold war being waged against us, we must always remember that their objective is our unrest."

Joan Blake to Wed on Saturday

A PAIR OF GRACEFUL white swans gliding around the pond are a picturesque addition to the lovely gardens at the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Blake of Wellesley Hills. And some 500 guests will have a chance to admire them and the rose gardens which are at the height of their bloom at the reception following the marriage of the Blakes' only daughter, Joan, Saturday.

Joan becomes the bride of Dr. Timothy A. Lamphier, resident surgeon at City Hospital, at a nuptial mass to be performed by Msgr. Edward Murray in St. Paul's Church, Wellesley. The wedding breakfast and dancing will take place in the gardens at Headacres, as the Blake estate is known.

Another impressive feature of the wedding will be a half hour musical program before the service by three Boston Symphony musicians, Anne Nesbit, harpist, Rolland Tapley, violinist, and Bernard Parronchi, cellist. Arthur Colburn, a family friend, will play the organ and Camille Girouard of the Handel and Haydn Society will be soloist.

Joan Blake

The bride's family is entertaining the bridesmaids and ushers at a buffet supper and dance in the garden this evening. Mary Cronin, one of Joan's bridesmaids, was hostess at a luncheon for the bride today.

A SON, Charles Saville Davis, was born June 21 at Flushing Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Orcutt Davis of Hollis, L. I., Mrs. Davis is the former Virginia Kretschmar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey C. Kretschmar of Waban. Mr. Davis is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Woodward Davis of Waban. He was a major in the Air Corps and led his group in the first daylight bombing of Berlin.

Mrs. William H. King of Richmond, Va., formerly Suzanne Davis of Waban and national figure skating champion in '34 and '35, is the infant's aunt.

THERE WERE many southern accents at the wedding reception of Boiling Byrd, daughter of Admiral Byrd, and William A. Clark, Jr., at the Byrd's Brimmer st. home yesterday. Though Boston has been his home for many years Admiral Byrd is a Virginia gentleman and a number of his relatives came on for the wedding.

Among them were his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs Thomas Byrd, with the former's daughter, Mrs. Harry Stimpson, and Mrs. Byrd's children by a former marriage, Lucy and Billie Mitchell. Also Mrs. Harry Byrd, wife of the Virginia Senator, and her children, Harry Jr., Westie and Beverly, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Richard E. Byrd 3d, the former Helen Bradshaw of Boston. The latter wore the white flannel suit and rose trimmed picture hat in which she was married in Washington this spring.

Bostonians present included Mrs. Ralph Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Forbes, Mrs. John Saltonstall with her daughters Anne and Peggy, Mrs. Benjamin Beale with Edith Hall, Mrs. Gardiner Lane and daughter Miss Katharine Lane, the well known sculptress; Mr. and Mrs. William Russell, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Ragle and Mrs. Louis Curtis with her daughter, Polly Woodville, and Com. Woodville of Newport

Years Ahead!

A totally new achievement in real Skin Care.

Developed by famous Research Chemists — regardless of cost — to protect their own Hands . . . when working with chemicals many times more trying to the skin than soap-and-water!

Not a Cream . . . Not a Lotion. It combines the best advantages of both in a rich Emollient COLLOID that really Beautifies the Skin.

Actually costs far more to manufacture than many old-style creams and lotions that sell for twice the price!

SEE FOR YOURSELF

BY THESE THREE SIMPLE TESTS:

HERE, without a doubt, is the most notable advance of many years in real Skin Care. There's nothing else like it — anywhere — at any price. And the truth of that plain fact can be readily seen . . . in five minutes time . . . by three revealing Tests.

The first test of M-LAB is to prove how totally, utterly free it is from every trace of stickiness, oil or grease. Simply apply it to the hands — and then, almost immediately, pull on a pair of tight kid gloves. You will find the gloves slip on . . . as comfortably as ever! . . . over your petal-smoothed skin. Then make the same test with any other Hand Care Product you've ever used before — whether Cream or Lotion. And see the comparison!

The second test of M-LAB is perhaps still more revealing. After applying freely to the skin, then (for this test) rinse the M-LAB thoroughly all away. Obviously, there will not be now the slightest trace of M-LAB left remaining on the surface. Yet it will have been so deeply, quickly absorbed . . . that you'll find its effects are still perfectly lovely . . . even after a thorough rinsing!

The third test is one you'll see — and feel — immediately on your very first use of M-LAB. Whether you use it on the hands . . . or as a warm-weather Powder Base . . . or for the neck and shoulders, the elbows and heels . . . you'll not fail to notice how superbly Soothing this remarkable new development actually is. In technical fact, it's so far ahead of old style Creams and Lotions that there's scarcely any reasonable comparison!

Look for the handsome pink gold label at leading Pharmacies and Department Stores. Sold only in large-economy jars, at the sensible price of but 85¢ (plus tax). Two months supply. It will really and truly delight you!

18 do with the murder of Rene Cote than I did.

"I know something about the problems of the Surprise family, and about their needs."

Townes was speaking quietly, dramatically, addressing himself directly to the judge—using all the cello tones of his voice. Bertha was quiet, intent.

"This girl, like all girls, liked nice things—pretty things—pretty dresses. Rene Cote was admitted to their humble home by James Surprise and was invited after a time to stay over. He went to get a change of clothing from down in Connecticut, where he was living at that time.

"He had a wife living in Bedford, Mass., Rene Cote did, but no one knew that. He had a car, something to attract a young woman of limited means. He didn't own the car—but nobody knew that. He didn't even own the tires.

"The result was that Bertha Cote took that trip to Connecticut with him—they began keeping company, and the inevitable happened.

"In the city of Portland, Me., on Dec. 7, 1941—I remember that day—the world will always remember that day as Pearl Harbor Day—Rene Cote and Bertha Surprise were married.

"They went to live briefly at Hartford, Ct., and came home two days before Christmas that year.

"Oddly enough, throughout the story, Chrstmas appears and keeps appearing—that sacred time of the year uppermost in all our hearts.

"Bertha came home to Spencer with her husband to spend the holiday with her husband at her mother's home.

"There came the night before Christmas—the gentlemen you saw in court here yesterday—Mr. Mallow, and Mr. Cote was arrested.

"He was always an expansive sort of individual, and when Bertha tried to find out what the trouble was he told her suddenly that he was an FBI agent, that there was no trouble at all. Bail was arranged, and on the following night—Christmas night—he was taken into custody again and charges were brought against him.

"Rene Cote was taken to Hartford in the State of Connecticut, and Bertha Cote followed him there—she was beside herself, she didn't understand what was going on. She was then pregnant, she was with child."

Judge Forte interrupting to ask: "How old was she then?"

Townes replied: "She was 21 years old." He then continued:

"She strove to get some help. I am reading now from a letter from the warden of Connecticut State Prison.

"Rene Cote stood trial in superior court. He was accused of bigamy and three counts of forgery. The forgery counts were nol prossed. He was sentenced Jan. 15, 1942, and was sentenced to serve 3 to 5 years in Connecticut state prison.

"Now you can understand this predicament of an inexperienced girl from a humble home—penniless—pregnant—with her lying-in expenses before her. So Bertha Cote got a job—a job in a factory. She worked from 8 in the morning until 5 in the evening until her feet began swelling. Her health was impaired. But it so happened that her sister, Charlotte Wetherell, had married a foreman of a factory, and he made it possible for her to work sitting down. That was not enough—it didn't yield enough—she was frantically saving her money—even pennies—to pay her lying-in expenses. She has never recovered from that strain.

"So, to increase her income, she got a job as a waitress. She worked in the factory from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and then worked as a waitress from 5 in the evening until 1 o'clock in the morning. It was too much for her. Her health gave out. About that time Rene Cote's real wife got a divorce.

"Because on Nov. 30, 1939, Cote had married a woman, to which union a child was born in July, 1940.

"Then on Dec. 7 of the following year after that child was born, he married Bertha Surprise—the warden says she was ignorant of the marriage—that there was no question of that.

"But in Connecticut, Rene had committed a series of forgeries.

"He was released on parole on Jan. 14, 1943, and while on parole he became legally married to the defendant, Bertha Surprise.

Rene Cote's parole record was good until 1944, when he again attempted to pass a forged check. He received three months' sentence, which was suspended because Bertha Surprise met a kind-hearted judge who listened to her pleas and gave her husband a suspended sentence. But he was returned to prison as a parole violator, discharged Sept. 28, 1944, after completion of his sentence.

"While in prison, Bertha Cote used her hard-earned money to buy him little delicacies. She visited him at the prison every week.

"Meanwhile, any number of bills and accounts were run up—even for his clothing—for Rene Cote never paid anything to anybody. Bertha Cote worked and paid off those bills. I have a letter from a creditor here thanking her for paying one completely.

"The experience of that prison warden showed that Rene Cote while under confinement and close supervision behaved very well. His instability revealed itself as soon as he was given any freedom. His word was worthless. He would defraud a stranger or a close friend. He was an intelligent man and an excellent mechanic.

"The true facts are known. A legal marriage took place between Rene and Bertha. They moved to Milford, Ct., and took a house there. He failed to pay the rent. She did not know this until the landlord told her about it. He bought furniture on the installment plan; he did not pay the grocery bills, and finally the lights were shut off.

"It crept into the testimony as I floundered about that he went to the cellar and crossed the wires to put the lights back on again.

"Bertha Cote had no means of heating anything for her baby. She went to a restaurant and had some milk heated for the baby. She returned home and found the lights were on in the house. When she complained, he struck her for the first time.

"She was puzzled. She was dumfounded. She didn't know what to do.

"I say, your honor, that this man developed the most fiendish theory that I have ever heard in my 30 years' experience at the bar.

"That theory was this and I say fiendish advisedly—when the man wished to subjugate her to his will all that he needed to do was to seize the baby. That is what Rene Cote did."

"Do you mean he put the child in some other home?" asked Judge Forte.

"He would put the child in another home," Townes continued, "and then he would not tell her where the child was.

"Rene Cote hid that baby in Orange, Ct. When Bertha Cote bent to his will he brought back the baby the next day.

"Then they went to Hartford, Ct. He forged a check for $200.

"And so Bertha Cote lived in dread and fear. And, if your honor please, that wasn't even living—that wasn't even existence.

"There was a time when she pretended to commit suicide, pretending to swallow poison. She was in despair at that time.

"And here's one of God's strange things about life I'll never be able to understand, and that is that in some cases the more a man abuses a woman, the more she loves him.

"One of the significant things about this marriage was that Rene Cote hadn't even paid for the wedding ring in the jewelry store in Brockton. Apparently, he didn't pay for anything.

"I realize that my client knew about the car deals her husband was illegally involved in. But if she said anything about these car deals, one of three things would happen. He would choke her, or beat her, or take it out on the baby.

"Mr. Cote was peculiar mentally. He beat her up on Carle ave. She then went home to her mother. He came up and took the baby away. She ran down the stairs and tried to get the baby and she could not get the baby. He also told her at one time, 'Get up and get your things out.' She got a beating.

"Brother Wheatley and myself talked about the divorce proceedings. Then the baby got boarded out and she went to work in Worcester.

"Her daughter, Barbara—one of the most beautiful children that I had ever seen was this little girl . . ."

Here Mrs. Cote broke down completely and Judge Forte ordered a recess.

At 11:15 court resumed and Atty. Townes continued:

"We haven't attempted to use the sympathy element in this case, your honor, or the sensational element. We have done nothing in this case to hurt this defendant.

"We did everything we could to protect the defendant in this case and her constitutional rights. We worked somewhat in the dark, diligently and honestly. There were things that were never revealed to us.

"Suddenly I had a feeling that we had done the honorable thing, not to put this defendant on the stand. Now I would put any witness on this stand, and I don't mean that I wouldn't take advantage of every technicality of the law—but there are limits.

"This girl was happy. I can't understand why. Except that she really loved this man—she loved this man with a profound devotion.

"There is no other conclusion to arrive it, except that she loved him. She stood his beatings, his cheating, his lying—but still she loved him.

"It is beyond my power of conception, but that's the way it is.

"When he got the job at Earle's garage and she found out that he was beginning to handle that money, you can imagine the awful fear in her heart. She knew he wouldn't go straight.

"That is why she said to Mrs. Earle if he is handling money, watch the accounts—to help him—she was sure as fate he couldn't withstand the temptation of handling money—and he didn't.

What did it mean to her. It meant confinement. It meant prison. It meant the same thing she had been through before.

And now we come to July of that year. There was supposed to be a convention and Earle was supposed to be sending him. Now we know where he was. We know that he was at Salisbury Beach. He had met a woman down there in July, and they were going here and there. While he spent, she was scrimping and saving.

Still that expensiveness, that was Rene Cote. He had to be the big fellow. Sure, the girl was delighted with that. When she married him she thought things would be available—a little pocket money—a little change—money spent for things we don't even notice—for movies—for a pack of cigarettes—but she didn't get it. He gave her $7 a week out of his $60. She was scrimping, saving, for what. So flowers could be sent the mother of the actress.

"That July vacation, he was going to come back a couple of days later after the convention to pick her up and take her somewhere. He never came back. She doesn't know until he had been back in the garage for two days.

"We know where he was—with Miss Belmore at Salisbury Beach—running around. She was home with her mother.

"There is an emotional experience about learning about a thing like that that would make most people do almost anything—but Bertha Cote didn't do anything. The web of lies he told her was unbelievable.

"They used to go out Saturday night—but there came a time when he wasn't taking her anymore. We know why. Then came the shady deals in automobiles.

"We come now to a man named Steele. One of the most trying times of my life was the moment that I became convinced that Walter Steele had not committed this crime. It is a terrible thing—an awful thing.

"My problem then became as speedily as possible to get Walter Steele out from under the complaint and at the same time not injure our client. I was in a terrible predicament . . . I did not sleep nights—it was shattering.

"I am not condoning the things he did. This business of running around with your friend's wife and knowing he's cheating the boss—I can't defend it.

"But I went to the district attorney and said, 'let Steele go.' I couldn't go much further without injuring my client.

I can't mitigate the fact that she named an innocent man. But your honor she didn't go through with it. She didn't testify against him. I had to do it without injuring her. It was the most difficult thing I ever did.

"Had she taken the witness stand, I dread to think what might have happened to Walter Steele. There was a great hubub about the grand jury session. I dread to think what might have happened if she lied about Walter Steele at that time.

"A great injury has been done that man. I would do anything in my power—I wish I could do something myself to undo it. It is a difficult situation—particularly difficult. You have got a serious duty. You must guarantee your client's constitutional rights and be worthy of the oath you took as a lawyer.

"In this case, the man, in spite of the fact that he went out looking for trouble, was set free. Well, let us move on from there.

"I had had no information on what the conversation with Lt. Sullivan had been. I had been taken by surprise. He is a good police officer, he has been my friend for many years. Like a good police officer, he did not reveal anything to me, just as I would not give any information to him.

"We were on opposite sides in a terrific game in which a human life was the pawn.

"I ask your honor to visualize that Christmas. This man was living then with a woman who loved him dearly at a season of the year when all of us are a little sentimental—a season when we are all trying to make things happier for our loved ones.

"This girl wanted that. She bought a watch on credit for a present for her husband, Rene. There was a doll carriage, too. It was the season of Santa Claus and, naturally, the carriage was hidden downstairs in the apartment of Mrs. Winberg.

"This girl suspected as early as last Thanksgiving that there was something going on. That was the time she was called by Western Union and asked about the hotel address on a telegram to New York, addressed 'Dearest Barbara,' which was sent by her husband, Rene.

"But she had looked forward to that Christmas and to being with him.

"And he was gone from the house—from noon until late at night, so late, in fact, that this girl does not know what time he came in. She had slipped off to sleep.

"You might askd why she ever stood for it. You might ask why she didn't leave him, but I have told you of her humble family. Where could she go?

"She knew that he was being called continually by the people who wanted the autos they had bought. The autos they had paid money for and never received.

"At that time when cars were so scarce . . . cars that you couldn't buy for the love of money and here's Cote buying three cars for $1500. Rene always had a way about him.

"There is the most unbelievable story about Judge Weston's estate and the cars.

"There she is sitting all alone night after night, no doors were locked. That has been brought out. When calls were made by Steele regarding the cars all Cote would say to her was 'keep him off my neck, tell him anything.'

"And then there was telegram from Barbara.

"There is the story about the trouble with Rene and her brother on Dec. 24.

"This is the night before Christmas. The woman was frail. She had cancer on one breast and she is waiting in her home to go to mass with Rene. He was going to take her. Rene had told her that night early he had to go somewhere and would be back. It comes along about 5 in the morning, to give out toys to little Barbara . . . Christmas morning . . . there was no Christmas that morning, of course. There couldn't have been. When he returned that morning he was tired. He went to sleep, he was exhausted. He worked all that day and was out all that night. Imagine being up there. Here it is Christmas Eve and there she is there all alone. There, only with her child.

"Your Honor, I now refer to Mrs. Minnock's testimony. Mrs. Minnock was a good neighbor and she tried to console Mrs. Cote by reminding her that Cote did not drink. No, Cote didn't drink—he was only out with another woman. I'll stay with a drink, Your Honor.

"Oh, no, Cote didn't drink. Maybe it would have been better if he had. Here is a husband and father, missing the joy of Christmas morning with his own child—missing the joy that Christmas morning could mean to that child with her father.

"And what was Bertha Cote doing that Christmas morning. She was knitting a sweater for the baby, and she was still knitting it when Rene came in at 7 a. m.

"Cote felt—he knew—that she would not revolt. He was the master. And up to now she had taken it, to put it bluntly, sitting down. Why, we'll never know.

"So then what does he do. He gets dressed up—he puts on his best bib and tucker, and goes back and sees Barbara.

"And now this girl comes to the end of her endurance—she comes to the point of despair when she says, "I've got to die sometime. What does it matter what time. I might as well die now.

"And so, in the small hours of that morning, Rene Cote was killed. Your Honor, you know and I know and she knows she had no right to take life—she knew that.

"But there is so much to justify in this case—there is so much—I haven't told the whole story, and, Your Honor, I can't justify this situation—I know that can't be done.

"It isn't pleasant to end this case this way. It is a very keen disappointment. I was confronted with a situation where you couldn't put this woman on the witness stand—I couldn't do that. Not in your conscience can you gamble with a woman's life. It might have meant the electric chair, or life imprisonment—it might have meant some terrible punishment.

"And so this girl pleaded guilty to manslaughter.

"This girl is suffering now—she will suffer to her dying day for this act she performed.

"And in the grimness of the jail when I talked with her last night, I assure you, your honor, that no promises were held out. She was told only that two roads were open, and that was certain.

"We simply told her—there are two roads—one is certain to the extent that we know that you will not be convicted of murder because the district attorney and his staff—kindly men, have made the opportunity available.

"Or, we said, you can take the uncertain road which might lead to your death. Nobody could decide that. That responsibility was too great for me. Nobody could decide that but Bertha Cote. And so we saw the work of months, weeks, days and nights, crumble and fall away.

"It was probably a wise decision. Certainly, she got it out of her system. She got it out of her soul.

"Your honor, I recognize that you serve three masters. You must satisfy your own conscience,

ANOTHER FUEL FAMINE

RATIONING of gasoline to dealers in a dozen Midwest States and the imminence of a nationwide petroleum shortage should arouse complacent New England.

There are no oil or coal resources here. All the fuel we consume for heating, lighting and power must be imported from distant areas.

Consequently, we are bound to be the worst sufferers in the event of a prolonged petroleum famine.

The sensible—in fact, the ONLY WAY to avoid such an economic catastrophe is to develop and use our own natural resource which, in many respects, is better and cheaper than either petroleum or coal.

That natural resource is WATER POWER.

Not one of our numerous rivers is fully harnessed for the generation of electricity.

Many of them are not even partially harnessed.

As a result, an amount of electricity sufficient to heat and light a hundred thousand homes and to maintain production in at least twenty thousand industrial plants is poured out to sea and utterly wasted.

All this was repeatedly brought to the attention of the six New England legislatures during the past winter.

But every one of them chose to do nothing.

Obviously, the average law-maker has yet to realize that there is enough idle investment capital in Boston alone to develop all New England rivers, streams and tidal basins to the ultimate if the right kind of consideration is given to private enterprise.

ALIEN ATTITUDES

IN A RECENT dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune, Joseph and Stewart Alsop said:

"After hunger and misery, the greatest danger to freedom in the world today is the fear-begotten tendency of peoples everywhere to go to the extreme right or the extreme left. Simply as a means of forestalling this tendency in the United States, President Truman can argue that his veto of the Labor Bill is in the interest of the general welfare."

We quote this as symptomatic evidence of the intellectual malady of seeking to apply European and Asiatic standards to the American scene.

The malady is an outgrowth of the cliches of the period, including the late Wendell L. Willkie's theories about "One World" and the current slogan that "international prosperity is indivisible."

Such generalizations embrace half truths which are dangerously misleading, for they confuse the millenium with tomorrow's hope for reasonable development and progress.

Such observers invariably overlook the fact that the science of biology reveals inequalities in human beings and that history demonstrates that the tempo of progress differs considerably in various parts of the world.

Thus, in middle-of-the-road United States, it is delusive and misleading to seek to guide practical politics by the decaying economies of the Old World.

Actually such defeatism is comparable to the throwing up of the sponge by a healthy hospital visitor on the ground that he has observed so much sickness in the wards.

Practical humanity dictates a different course, and, in the interest of world progress, it behooves us to put our own economic house in order, and keep America strong.

Only by keeping alive the traditions of liberty and progress can we serve as a beacon of hope and inspiration for other peoples who are going through a difficult period of economic and psychological readjustment.

The destiny of the United States now, more than ever before, is to demonstrate the continuing benefits of a strong, workable system of government based on the free choices of individual citizens.

NOW THERE ARE some noon clubs. They have floor shows and dancing same as night clubs, but between 12 noon and 2:30 p. m. This seems to offer an unusual opportunity for midday relaxation for the tired business man. No doubt, it will also give many executives an opportunity to know their secretaries better. And we mustn't overlook the fact the noon clubs will be a refreshing interlude in many a little stenographer's busy day.

PLEASE NOTE—Aries (March 21-April 20) people suffer more from toothaches than those born under any other sign. So say the stargazers. Those stargazers certainly cover a lot of ground. Bette Davis was born under Aries. I must find out if Bette has many toothaches. If so, I want to extend my sympathy. If she has a toothache when I see her, I will invite her to cry on my shoulder. Of all the minor ailments I think a toothache is the worst.

Bette Davis

WILD PUP—That life on a ranch was excellent for our pup's health, but we note a little wildness has crept into his make-up. He seems to have an excess of health which he wants to work off. Formerly he merely chased jackrabbits and squirrels. Now he will chase anything. Even trying to jump into the air to grab a flying pigeon. Not only that he swims out in the ocean after seagulls. Oh, well, it is a great pleasure to see so much evidence of the joy of living.

YOUNG OLD TIMERS—So there is to be produced another film version of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" By John Fox, Jr. It should be good. I suppose somebody will now revive the author's other hit, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." That was a play as well as a film. Charlotte Walker starred in both original versions. There was also a song titled "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine. If you remember the words and tune of that, you are a cinch to get into the Young Old Timers Ass'n. Incidentally, in 1908, John Fox, Jr., married Fritzi Scheff. At that time Fritzi was in her heyday as a musical show luminary and was starring in "Mlle. Modiste." Remember the hit song in that show. I don't. Maybe, as several subscribers have recently suggested, I should be tossed out of the Young Old Timers.

HORSES & WOMEN—In some places life is getting easier and easier for housewives. In New York, a housewife doesn't even have to worry about getting home from the movies or a bridge party in time to prepare her weary husband's dinner. All she has to do, when she arrives home, is to phone one of the many places who deliver a complete dinner all prepared. When this service was originated it was in the luxury class. Now it is handled at popular prices.

RASPBERRIES—Note it reported raspberries are selling for $1.33 a quart. Don't know how much higher that is than in my boyhood days, when the man came around our neighborhood selling berries from a wagon. Anyway, raspberries are my favorite berries. I am going to save up and buy a quart.

OLD TIMER—"So you think Ed 'Strangler' Lewis must be over 50 years old," writes a Glendale, Cal., subscriber. "My boy Ed is over 60 years old but still in the ring tossing young fellows around." (Note—I believe the Ed "Strangler" Lewis now wrestling is the second grappler of that name. The original "Strangler" Lewis wrestled in the 90's.

PASSING BY—Col. Albert Boyd. Of the U. S. Army Air Force. Flew a plane at the rate of 625 miles an hour. I still have it in mind that Louis Bleriot, who made the first plane flight across the English Channel in 1909, left $25,000 in a Paris bank to be awarded to the first man to fly a plane over 600 miles an hour on a level flight. But I have been unable to check on it. But I am a stubborn checker. I'll get at the inside on this yet . . . Earl Carroll. Musical show producer and restaurant maestro. Says he is going to quit the musical show production business. Maybe he could be persuaded to return to writing musicals. He was good at that. He gave us among other hits "Canary Cottage" and "So Long Letty." Eddie Cantor made his first musical show appearance in the former.

"I wish you wouldn't enter so many radio contests at the same time!"

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Copyright, 1947, King Features Syndicate

NEW YORK, June 26—I take it as a rather personal favor when my friend, Benny Pross indites one of his moralistic messages to American labor.

Westbrook Pegler

Just by citing and quoting, in such cases, I am able to make my point that the devil has a glib tongue for Scripture in these arguments over the obvious crimes and the theoretical virtues of American unionism.

When such an old mushmouth as William Green acknowledges that, unfortunately, there are a few undesirable characters in official positions in the union movement, it takes energy and work to set down the facts which prove that no other occupation this side of burglary has so high a proportion of thieves and thugs, to whittle a nice point on the undeniable fact that Green, far from throwing them out or helping the public authorities throw them into prison where they belong, often has taken their side.

WHEN PROSS produces one of his essays, as he did again in the June 16 number of the Beverage Retailer Weekly, published in New York, he proves my case so nicely that I don't have to get out of my chair.

I just say to the jury, "Listen who's talking." I don't know why my friend, Benny, is so good to me.

Benny, as some of my pupils may recall, is executive director of Wine, Liquor and Distillery Workers' Union, Local No. 1, and a boss under various other titles, of many other A. F. of L. unions of sales-people, warehouse workers, and handlers of drugs and cosmetics and clerks.

He has twice been convicted of fraud in bankruptcy. He was tried in the Federal Court in Newark on a charge of sluicing 10,500 cases of over-quota whisky into the black market for our brave boys in the training camps early in the war, but he got off there.

My research has been diligent and thorough. I have followed Benny Pross from the time of his arrival from Russia at the age of 12, and I am willing to defend him, free, against any man who asserts that he ever did an honest day's work in his life.

BENNY OFTEN COMPOSES, either by hand or by counsel, high-sounding editorials about freedom, tyranny, Fascism, honor, unity and, of course, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

He likes gala occasions such as Labor Day and Memorial Day, which is an appropriate time to lower his eyes and tone and pay the sort of tribute known as heart-felt to those fine, freedom-loving American boys who gave their last full measure of devotion on foreign fields and such as that, but not until they had turned their pants pockets inside out on hot summer nights in Georgia, Mississippi and Texas, getting up $25 a bottle for the black market booze.

Benny Pross is a fine man, of the American Federation of Labor pattern, and when he defends the character of the typical A. F. of L. unioneer the pot is calling the kettle white.

"THERE IS NO doubt that a few elements of organized labor have sometimes shown a deplorable lack of responsibility and an utter disregard for anybody but themselves," he wrote under the title of "Guest Editorialist" in this trade publication on June 16.

"This reckless selfishness has naturally resulted in some public impatience (Benny bought a beautiful high-suburban estate at Lake Mahopac last year which couldn't have stood him a dollar less than $50,000, all told) and is the greatest factor for explaining the present hue and cry against labor."

"LABOR" IS A term used by all the Prosses, Bioffs and Fays as a synonym for themselves.

"A small minority of the hue-and-cryers are merely grinding their own axes of prejudice and hate." But if he means me he is unjust to Westbrook Pegler. I love Benny Pross.

"The vast majority of the remainder must be made to understand, if they already do not, that their impatience caused by a few unions cannot fairly be leveled at all acts of all unions.

"The impatience of an aroused section of the public, it is said, will easily be prevailed upon to condemn all unions because of a few. I, for one, will never believe it. Of course, Congress may pretend that the people want shackling of labor. But the people, and many of them carry union cards, will prove that sound and fury, like chickens, come home to roost."

Brother Pross' record has been on public display through these winsome little essays for about four years. He is well beloved of the higher orders of the American Federation, detested and feared by the rank and file who wear his shackles and I will ever cherish him as a perfect example of the exempt and immune unioneer to whom I owe a very decent portion of my taxable income.

you are a high official of the public, and you have the welfare of this defendant to consider.

"It is a pretty difficult place to be in—you have to be guided by many considerations—one being the justice to a person who has taken a human life. Not premeditated murder. But the reckless consequence of a blow struck with an instrument too hard.

"Your honor, I have known you through the years. I know your heart. I know how conscientious you can be. There is not anything more that I can say.

"Not another voice will be lifted in behalf of this girl.

"I beg you to be as lenient as is possible.

Townes ended his plea at 7 minutes before 12 noon.

Wheatley then rose and said:

"Your honor, as we approach this phase of the case, I am thankful, as always, that I am an assistant district attorney whose duty is handling these cases. I have been an assistant to Mr. Dewing for some years and have handled many cases which presented many problems.

"But the problems presented in this case are equal or far exceeding those in any other case I have handled.

"Those problems and the decision on them are almost trivial compared with the one that you, as justice of this court, must make on the problem that confronts you as to what to do with a person who has pleaded guilty or been found guilty of a crime.

"Certainly this case is not an easy one. It may very well be about as hard as any you have ever had.

"In an appropriate consideration of this, I suppose a fair outline of the crime this defendant has committed is needed.

"It is still impossible to give you—although my brother, Mr. Townes has been very helpful and the police have done a tremendous amount of work—the exact details of what happened in the third floor apartment of 72 Harvard st., Brockton, on that morning of the 28th of December.

"But there are some things that are certain.

"One is that the defendant in this case on that morning committed manslaughter. That is, she took a man's life without justifiable cause.

"Another is that there was no one else involved.

"The third is that remarks, which aroused confusion and doubt in the minds of police and defense counsel as well, were made by the defendant.

"With that as background, I will say that the police arrived at the apartment around 4:30 that morning and immediately talked with the defendant.

"Police and prosecuting officers, too, always suspect that a person who has committed a crime will exercise what we call the strong instinct—self preservation—and do whatever can be done to throw the investigation off the track.

"In a good many such cases, the person who commits the crime is not going to say, 'I did it. Here is how it happened' This case was no exception.

"The police were given a story by the defendant that she had been awakened by some person having conversation with her husband about money. As she turned on the light in her bedroom, she said she saw someone passing through the kitchen and down the back stairs.

"The investigation was started immediately by police with the aid of Lt. Sullivan of the State Police. I would be remiss in my duty at this time if I did not state my belief that the work of the police in this case will go down in the history of Massachusetts criminal annals as an example of persistence and devotion and to the obligation to attempt to find the truth of the events that happened that morning.

"In that investigation, the defendant was talked to and inquired of again and again. It was fortunate that the State was able to bring in such a witness as Miss Cassidy who presented a verbatim report of these examinations. The people are entitled to know how their chosen officials, the police, operate in these cases.

"After listening to her testimony, we can have nothing but admiration for those involved in the attempt to reach the truth in this case.

"I listened with interest to my brother, Mr. Townes, in his representation of Rene Cote. I knew Rene Cote intimately. I represented him as counsel.

"I had my car in his garage many times, and I want to say that he is about as smooth and as persuasive an individual as you would ever find.

"Rene Cote certainly had two sides—black side and a fair side.

"And now we come to the money deals. We found that he was involved in a number—some so involved and intricate that it is unbelievable. In the three-car story alone, Steele was only one of three or four who were taken in by exactly the same story and paid Rene Cote exactly the same amount of $750 for exactly the same three imaginary cars.

"We found that he gave the defendant no money—she had nothing to spend on herself or her child.

"So on the second of January, as the question of money began to be more and more discussed, the defendant said to us that she would not be surprised if it wasn't Mr. Earle in the house that morning. But we brought to her attention that she had said that Cote was going to leave Earl's Jan. 1, and she said "Oh, yes."

"Your Honor, this was the first attempt on the part of the defendant to put the blame on an innocent person.

"Shortly thereafter, Steele, who one Tuesday had come into the police station on advice of counsel and told police about the $750 deal, and who had previously been questioned when it was learned that he had been friendly with Mrs. Cote, was intentionally brought by the police where Mrs. Cote could see him.

"Not long afterward, Mrs. Cote said, 'That man looked something like Wally Steele' and later she said, 'It was Wally Steele,' and the lieutenant said to her, 'I don't believe it.'

"But within a very few minutes, she told the other officers about Steele—all the details of the conversation she said she had with him—her attempt to have him come back in the morning—his going in to her husband's room with the pipe.

"Miss Cassidy was asked to come over. Mrs. Cote told her story—then she made her statement again in Steele's presence.

"The police had no choice — they had a definite accusation, they had no choice but to hold him for murder which they did.

"Early the next morning, the chief went to the hotel where arrangements had been made to take care of the defendant for the night. This was done partly at her own request because she said she was frightened, and, frankly, it was done partly because the police were not satisfied with her story and did not want her to leave the city.

"He said 'How are you" and she said 'I'm fine' and he said 'did you sleep well," and she said 'yes,' and he said 'I wish I could say the same,' and she said 'what's the matter,' and he said 'I can't get Wally Steele out of my mind. Do you realize that your story may send him to the electric chair.' And she said 'I can't help it—he's guilty.' And she repeated that statement a number of times at other occasions.

"Steele was arraigned in court the next day and taken to Plymouth jail, where he was held from Jan. 4 to Jan. 20. On Jan. 20 he was brought into court for a hearing before Judge Rowe as to whether he should be held for the grand jury. The defendant was asked to testify and she said she would not.

"Miss Cassidy read a transcript of the statements, and the judge ruled it did not constitute a confession. We released Walter Steele.

"That was on the 20th day of January. Not until last night, until the 25th of June—or the 24th or the 26th—I've lost track of time. Until last night we did not know definitely from the lips of the defendant in this case that Walter Steele was not in the Cote apartment that morning.

"Oh, he was loose, he was not held, but all the time he was very much under a cloud—a cloud that she alone could remove. She never came forward to remove that cloud until the evidence became so overwhelming that she asked counsel to tell us she was willing to plead in this case.

"You would expect a person to do what he or she can can from self preservation—but the act of the defendant of accusing an innocent person and for five months not retracting that accusation—I cannot condone, nor, I believe can any of the good citizens of this county.

"This is a most difficult problem. I think while we consider it and we cannot take it from our minds what has happened during the last five months. We must also remember the amount of effort and money spent on this case—by investigating authorities, State Police, Brockton police, the clerk's office. The trial has been going on since a week ago Monday.

We have there 14 men in the jury, all of whom were selected because of not having any biased opinion. There were 150 men called before the jury selected. I say your honor, these men have given up their time since a week ago Monday. They have been away from the wives and family . . . all in an attempt to find out the truth . . . as to what had happened on that morning of Dec. 28.

"I make the recommendation and doing it, I don't throw out entirely the background of what my brother, Mr. Townes, has brought out.

"I will concede, as my brother Townes has so eloquently pointed out, that there was not much happiness in the life of this defendant with Rene Cote. But as my brother has said, she really loved this man.

"She brought a divorce action, but she chose to come back to him. It was a voluntary choice. She came back to him and she lived with him.

"We have heard the testimony of her neighbors, and the state is proud to point out that they told the truth—the truth 100 per cent. But we heard no evidence from them of physical violence, except that the defendant's arms showed marks of blows.

"We can't for a moment believe that there was any excuse for this defendant to take a life. And so, your honor, I recommend a sentence of 12 to 20 years. Wheatley concluded on this recommendation and a recess was called.

After the recess, Townes crossed over beside Mrs. Cote and clasped her hand in reassurance for a moment.

Judge Forte then said:

"Mr. Foremen and gentlemen, you will rise now. Thank you. You may now remain seated. It was my duty to discharge you this morning as soon as the defendant changed her plea, but I thought you would wish to remain to hear the pleas of counsel and the disposition of the case.

ATTY. EBEN G. TOWNES
In Appeal for Mercy

"There are a few things I have to tell you—I would rather do it now before the imposition of sentence, because once you are discharged from your duty, you will be on your own. I wish to admonish you for your own peace of mind, to keep your counsel as far as what has transpired between you regarding that trial.

"You did not hear the entire case. It was your duty to keep your minds open until all evidence was presented, until counsel had made their arguments, and until the court had charged you as to the law—until all those things were done you were under a duty not to reach any decision.

"This morning, this trial has come to an end. You might say it was a waste of time to be here an expense to the county to keep you here. I say it was not a waste of time, not an expenditure of money. It was entirely in accord with our tradition of justice in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and County of Plymouth Perhaps we would not have had the pleas had you not been here and had the evidence we have heard not been presented. This is not new—it is in accordance with the constitution of Massachusetts in 1780—even if the person committed a crime receives his freedom unless the commonwealth completes a case against them within a reasonable time.

"It might seem harsh, dictatorial, expensive at the time—but it is the best method yet devised to protect the innocent.

"Other countries are not so slow. Somebody makes up his mind that so and so is guilty and he is shot. Had that system been in effect here, perhaps Walter Steele would have been found guilty instead he is innocent.

"Now we come to the subject of circumstantial or direct evidence at the time—if the defendant had testified in court that Steele had committed homicide. Direct evidence has a weakness, the possibility of mistake or falsehood.

Also an example of circumstantial evidence. The question of footsteps in the fresh fallen snow mean to us that someone walked on that snow other than the defendant. Only one thing to conclude—direct evidence is probable evidence, circumstantial evidence is probable evidence. Each has it defects, and the conclusions must be left to the judgment, common sense, and experience of 12 men selected by lot from the community.

"From the evidence presented here by the Commonwealth, a homicide was commited, a man was deprived of his life, and it makes no difference what character he is or was.

"Nor does it matter how much of life still was ahead of him Even a convicted murderer, with only 10 minutes remaining before he is to die in the electric chair, cannot be subjected to murder or homicide. The best men in the Commonwealth or the blackest man in the Commonwealth is subject equally to the protection of the law.

"From the evidence you have heard, I can venture the opinion that there is inescapable evidence that there was some combat. Rene Cote was not deprived of life instantly in the quiet of his sleep. There was evidence from the marks of his body there there had been a fight.

"He was not found on the divan. The doctor testified if he had been hit there by either of two impacts, it would have been sufficient to knock him unconscious He would have remained on the divan unconscious but the body was not found on the divan

"It is now undisputed that there was no third person present there The only one that had a hand in the homicide was the defendant. The conclusion is inescapable that she was not strong enough to move his unconscious body from the divan to the spot where it was found. In other words, it was not a cool, calculated planned murder. The Christmas tree had fallen, the hassock was overturned.

JAMES SURPRISE
"Had Nothing to Do With It"

"If a person had planned to kill Rene Cote, a weapon which would have caused instant death, such as a knife, probably would have been used. There would have been no marks on the hands, no cuts on the lips, no teeth knocked out, no marks on the neck, no signs of strangulation. Not to mention the blows which caused his death on the left side of the skull and the top of the head.

"If murder is committed while a person is under anger that is manslaughter. The defendant has pleaded guilty to that.

"Members of the jury, I want to thank you in behalf of the court and for the services performed. You are excellent citizens. You have served part and parcel to the administration of justice. The reports I have received show that you have upheld your dignity. This case has attracted wide attention."

Judge Forte went on and lauded members of the press and for their manner in covering the case, saying:

"They have given the public just exactly what has taken place in this courtroom."

"The defendant has pleaded guilty to manslaughter, that is taking one's life. In the old days it was an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. Later the laws were changed and leniency shown.

"What were the circumstances in this case—there was no intent. There was an assault with an instrument and Rene Cote, it has been presented by evidence, had a brittle skull.

"She, the defendant had a provocation in this case, it was not momentary but over the years it had been growing. She is now 29 years of age. She has led a good life, as good a life as anyone could have.

"I am taking into consideration that she has no record, apparently is a loving mother and am not being unmindful of the fact that a child in this case will suffer the most

"When she finishes the sentence she will have paid her debt to society. I want to compliment Lt. Sullivan—Lt. D. Edward Sullivan of Brockton police, the last witness for the Commonwealth.

"She had coolness and calculation to mislead the police. That is not a panic symptom. We must take into consideration that she removed the blood spots and misled her neighbors and police. Nor did she hesitate to shed suspicion on others—not on one, but on two persons, Mr. Earle as well as Mr. Steele. These factors cannot go unnoticed.

"Yet she has good qualities and the court is not unmindful of them. May I have the indictment, please."

Clerk Olsson turned and handed him the indictment. Judge Forte wrote o nit and Olsson called on Mrs. Cothe to stand. She rose to her feet and stood unflinching as Olsson said:

"The court, in consideration of the offense to which you now stand convicted, sentences you to the women's reformatory at Framingham for not less than 3½ and not more than six years."

A murmur swept the court and officers rapped for order, instructing spectators to remain seated as the defendant left the room. A recess was called.

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, June 26—All those rumors of what Joan Fontaine will do next are guesses in the dark. Her bridegroom and boss, Bill Dozier, told me yesterday that "Letter From an Unknown" starts Aug. 18, and that's the first for Rampart, Joan and Bill's own company.

Joan Fontaine

Of course we all knew Bill had bought "Letter From an Unknown," but I think it is interesting that he is negotiating with David Selznick to borrow the young French actor, Louis Jourdan, for the lead opposite Joan. Word has leaked out that Jourdan is the French equivalent of a knockout in "The Paradine Case."

I'd like to say right here that it was Orry-Kelly who made those beautiful clothes for Joan in "Ivy." That job got Orry in so solid with Universal-International that he's now doing the femme wardrobe for "Mortal Coils."

WORD THAT the Duke of Windsor is spending $50,000 on a face lifting job for his ranch in Canada before Eagle-Lion starts work on "Stampede" makes me bold to ask the question, "Is the Duke paying for the job, or is the Canadian government, or Robert Young?" I can hardly feel that the Duke is quixotic enough to spend all that dough for a mere movie company. However, the money is being spent, and it's coming from somewhere, I don't know where.

Joan Leslie joins James Craig as his co-star in this jaunt to Canada for "Stampede." And that reminds me—one of the Canadian papers sent me a letter and asked me to get details about this movie. I blush to say I've lost the letter.

BILLY GOETZ was telling me yesterday he's going to team Yvonne De Carlo and Dan Duryea again in "River Lady." They are working now in "Black Bart."

"And," says bill, "it's going to be in technicolor. Universal-International has almost a 100 per cent color schedule. We decided yesterday to make 'Mr. Penbody and the Mermaid' in color, too."

As a gesture to the young generation, Yvonne and Duryea will have Rod Cameron and Helena Carter, the cute redhead in "River Lady." In fact, the cast will be made up mostly of the younger generation.

I WAS CHATTING with Herbert Wilcox, who is here with his lovely wife, Anna Neagle, and he tells me Michael Wilding, since James Mason left England, is fast becoming one of the top favorites. In fact, Michael was third in a popularity contest.

Wilcox has worked out an interesting deal, he tells me, with Louis B. Mayer, whereby there's an exchange of talent. The way it works is, Anna Neagle will make a picture at MGM and have as her co-star one of the studio's top names. Michael Wilding will make a picture in England with one of the MGM femme favorites.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Howard Hughes' wandering right-hand man, Johnny Meyers, cabled yesterday: "Got a thrill reading my name in your column in a Brazilian paper yesterday. Needed a translator to find out what you said about me—but the name's the same in any language."

Meyers went on to say he and Bob Hope are having a time for themselves. "Tonight we go to the American Embassy for a party for Gen. Carl Spaatz and then hope to take off for Buenos Aires tomorrow." Latest report is that Bob should be back here around July 18. As for Johnny, he goes on to Cairo.

I knew months ago Marlene Dietrich was going into "Operations Candy Bar," but I was asked not to say a word until Jean Arthur had given her approval—she's the star.

Well, Jean has not only given her approval, but is very enthusiastic about getting Marlene. Charlie Brackett, producer and author of "Candy Barr," leaves July 1 for Germany on locations. Billy Wilder, the other half of this highly successful team, is already there, or at least on his way.

Victor Orsatti, who has taken over the agency of his late brother, Frank, has never worked so hard in his life as he is these days. He made a deal with Warner Brothers for George Bruce. That was a surprise, because Georoge has been on the MGM lot for seven years, and wrote such hits as "Navy Blues," and his last chore at MGM was "Fiesta," which incidentally has got more publicity than any picture made on the lot in years.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at Random: Jack Warner is giving a big shindig for J. Arthur Rank July 3, sort of a pre-Fourth affair. Speaking of Rank, I had a letter yesterday in which someone told me Wesley Ruggles was already working on Bing Crosby's script.

Barney Glazer and Muriel Campbell, Broadway actress, are at a table for two practically every night. She's the first girl Glazer has concentrated on since he was legally separated from his wife

Gloria Franklin and Sid Silvers will be married July 15.

Esther Williams

Ben Gage flew to Miami yesterday to see Esther Wiliams, who is on vacation. They'll then go on to Mexico.

The Eddie Lasker-Peggy Cummins duo has become more or less steady. Saw them together at the Chanteclair. Also Louis B. Mayer with Herbert Wilcox, Anna Neagle and the Victor Savilles.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark Rabwin have three adopted children, and now Marcella (Mrs. Rabwin) is expecting her first baby in August.

Don "Red" Barry's ex, Peggy Stewart, and George Mann, the vaudeville headliner, are as constant in their attentions as are Joan Crawford and Red.

Tommy Dorsey and Audrey Young missed Pat Dane by a minute. They walked into Ciro's just as the former Mrs. Dorsey walked out. These things happen in Hollywood practically every night.

Had a letter from Minna Wallis, enclosing two losing tickets for the Ascot races. Said Minna, "I can lose in England on the ponies just the way I do in Hollywood."

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

THE WEAKNESS of American political parties is their irresponsibility as organized units for action. Neither the chairman of their national committees nor their chosen leaders in Congress can discipline any member of the party who chooses to get completely off the reservation.

No caucus decision is really binding. Each individual represents not a party but at best the constituency that elects him; at worst, he may represent some outside group, even one that is opposed to the party whose label he bears.

Wayne Morse, Republican Senator from the State of Oregon, is neither a part of the Republican party nor does he represent those who elected him from Oregon. He is the spokesman in the Senate for the dominant leadership of organized labor. He has opposed his party regularly since his election to the Senate, voting generally with the few remaining New Dealers. He is by principle and action no more a Republican than Henry Wallace, but there is nothing his party can do about it.

The filibuster which he organized against the Taft-Hartley bill was a shoddy performance because it was premised on the assumption that either the President or the CIO would and could buy off seven Senators but needed more time to do it. The open unscrupulousness, the cheap maneuvering, the shameless rejection of Democratic processes would have been severely criticized in a Bilbo; they cannot be justified in a man of Wayne Morse's claims to learning and liberalism.

Wayne Morse served the New Deal in the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt but he always registered as a Republican. Undoubtedly, this was because Oregon was a Republican State and a New Dealer had no chance of developing a political career there. He was new to Oregon, having come from Wisconsin, but somehow he convinced the conservative Oregonians that he was a sound man.

He has at times taken what looked like an independent attitude as when he forced Harry Bridges to abide by an arbitration agreement, or when he attacked John L. Lewis and Harold Ickes. But much of that looked like grandstand playing because since Morse has been in the United States Senate, he has acted more the advocate of the CIO program than the representative of the people of Oregon or a member of the Republican party.

While Wayne Morse was campaigning for election to the Senate, his speeches were of a conservative character. He supported Tom Dewey and denounced President Roosevelt. Richard L. Neuberger, in an article on Morse, in the "American Mercury" says:

". . . Morse's close friends on the university campus, knowing his personal belief in international co-operation, heard him tell rural audiences that the Hull reciprocal trade program had to be abandoned in the interests of 'American markets for the American farmer.'"

That was "campaign oratory." Once he got into the Senate, he has played the opponent of the Republican party. He tied in with Claude Pepper and the Crooner Glen Taylor and other New Dealers. By nature an advocate, he fights hard and well for the cause he espouses, but he puts himself above loyalty to any group with which he associates. He is an extreme individualist who serves best his private opinions and aims.

The most curious fact in the controversy over the Taft-Hartley bill is that Wayne Morse approved the committee's majority report. The next day he turned on himself and opposed the bill. Since then he has led the fight against it. His ten-hour filibuster speech added nothing to his stature. He produced no new arguments. He added nothing to human knowledge or his party's leadership. He only proved that he could do what Huey Long and Bilbo did and not as well. And he did it against his own party.

Republicans throughout the country are resentful of Morse's conduct. Most Democrats do not respect him because whereas men like the elder LaFollette, George Norris or William Borah were of outstanding reputations before they took adamant and irreconcilable positions on public questions, Wayne Morse throws his weight about without particular purpose. It is as though he wanted to make certain that everybody knew that he was in the Senate. He courts the klieg lights.

WASHINGTON, June 26—President Truman might have got his labor bill veto sustained if he'd fed his guests better.

A couple of days before the historic vote, which vetoed the veto, Sen. John M. Overton of Louisiana returned from Tucson, Ariz., where he had been for five weeks with a bronchial ailment.

He had pretty much made up his mind to vote against the President but he had something more sectional on his mind. He wanted Truman to back him in obtaining $50,000,000 for flood control in the lower Mississippi valley. So he called the Veto Kid.

"COME DOWN HERE," cooed the Prez, "and we'll talk it over."

Overton did. The President put on all the heat he could generate. Then he invited the Louisianan to dinner.

It was a tactical error. The piece de resistance was fish. Mr. Overton felt so unfishlike he went back and voted to override the host

Sen. Tom Connally of Texas was one of the famous 13 Senators invited by the Independence Interdicter to a pre-vote lunch. Connally voted to override the veto—and many think they know why. Fifteen minutes after returning from the White House luncheon Mr. Connally was seen in the Senate restaurant hungrily wolfing doughnuts and coffee.

A solon needs nourishing broth and jelly. The way to his heart is through his stomach.

IT IS VERY difficult to make Sen. Pepper, of Florida, unpopular when Mrs. Pepper is around. You get ogling her and your political convictions temporarily seem unimportant.

The lady is loaded with what some of my more erudite chums describe as "that there." A few years ago she won third prize in a beauty contest at the Black Rock Country Club outside Atlanta, Ga.

She used to be known as "Gorgeous."

I HAVE BEEN holding this back because I was afraid the self-centered oaf would use it himself. But he hasn't, so here goes:

Mr. Bob Considine, the eminent man of letters, caught his 5-year-old son Barry in the act of smacking his younger brother, Dennis, aged 3.

Mr. Considine took after the bully, intending, as he said, "to belt the pants off him." On the fifth time around the room, Mr. Considine attempted too short a turn and fell on his face.

Whereupon the young nellion turned and yelled: "Happy Father's Day!"

MY PAL, JIMMY HATLO, whose famous cartoon strips "They'll Do It Every Time" and "Little Iodine," are the delight of millions, is being deluged with requests from Congress for autographed copies of a recent cartoon.

This is rather appropriate because the idea was supplied to Mr. Hatlo by Rep. Walter Norblad of Oregon.

The cartoon's first panel shows a delegation of constituents telling a Congressman: "We have come to demand economy in government spending! Cut out a lot of these useless offices and bureaus that are wasting the people's money!"

The second panel shows the same group descending upon the same Congressman after he has put through economy measures. They are howling that he is washed up politically and demanding he be impeached. One of the mob is screaming:

"What's the idea of cutting out the flea census bureau in our town? Why don't you pick on other cities first? Start your economy wave somewhere else."

And, adds Mr. Hatlo, "They'll do it every time."

I dislike giving away business secrets, but in case anyone wishes to get in touch with Mr. Hatlo, he is employed by an up and coming concern called King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th St., New York 17, N. Y.

Now do something nice for me, will you, Hatlo?

English Drama For Keith Screen

"Great Expectations," adapted from the famous Charles Dickens novel and co-starring two of Britain's most lustrous performers, John Mills and Valerie Hobson, opens tomorrow on Keith Memorial screen.

The story concerns itself with a poor English boy, a blacksmith's apprentice, who befriends an escaped convict and in turn is befriended by an eccentric, rich woman.

The lady in question, who has confined herself to her musty mansion for a quarter-century after an unhappy love affair, is the foster aunt of a young girl. Though both are just in their teens, the lad falls in love with the girl but the girl, who has learned to hate men from her foster aunt, is mean and rude to him.

An unknown benefactor leaves the boy, now a young man, a great deal of money. He believes it was the rich, strange woman and proceeds to establish himself as a gentleman in London. From then on, things happen fast.

Two youthful discoveries make their American debut in the picture. They are lovely, 16-year-old Jean Simmons, and Anthony Wagner, young son of a London plumber.

"Great Expectations" is a J. Arthur Rank presentation and was directed by David Lean.

Two French Films On Old South Program

"Three Hours for Love," the last French film Jean Pierre Aumont made before coming to this country to be starred in Hollywood productions, and "Harvest," the French prize film starring Fernandel and written and directed by Marcel Pagnol, are to be seen on the Old South Theater screen, beginning tomorrow.

Concentrate Peps Up Face

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

MAYBE IT IS JUST AS WELL that summer comes to make us sit up and take notice of our natural gifts and lack of them. In addition to affording us a healthy interlude in the sun . . . it brings us frankly out in the open and we must either "sink or swim" with our appearance . . physical and fascial. And where is your summer sunshine?

BREVITY is the soul of wit . . . and will also be the mark of fashion on the beach this prankish, hide-and-seek summer. And this jewel-toned, nylon lastex swim suit typifies the acclaimed costume for frolicking in the sand and sun. But you must remember to guard that schoolgirl beauty with a specific cosmetic cream.

There's no hiding the face in the coat collar . . . no concealment of figure defects in Mother Hubbards . . . unless you aim to be a shut-in all the wonderful days of July, August and early September. Is that living?

If a resilient, youthful, buoyant facial radiance is something you've always yearned for but could never attain . . . let me tell you about a perfectly grand cream concentrate of oils that matches itself against age and the elements.

This product contains certain lipoids . . . an amazing ingredient . . . which stimulates and reenlivens glandular secretions so that the skin is pepped up into being blooming and blushing and ever faithful to youthful activity. This precious little remedy will stand your complexion in good stead in months to come. It will startle your complexion out of its lethargy and inject a new-found sparkle you never thought possible.

AWAKENS THE COMPLEXION

Because the activating effect of this cream concentrate is so deep and firm . . . it would be wise to use it only once a week if your skin is so-called young . . . and not more than twice or three times a week if your skin is aging. Start in by leaving it on the skin for only 10 minutes . . . and gradually work up to a treatment lasting about half an hour . . . no more.

You'll feel your facial tissue tingle with renewed spirit and energy. You'll note your complexion becoming more glowy and radiant. And pretty soon your mirror will reflect the new revitalization that has awakened your complexion like an alarm clock that startles you out of the arms of Morpheus in the morning.

This cream has a peculiarly wonderful tightening effect on the pores. We have seen scarred tissue reduced to almost invisibility after continued feeding on this cream. It is not a soothing cream . . . but an alerting one . . . a cream that forcibly makes the complexion awake with recaptured softness and smoothness.

For the name of this amazing ingredient cream for renewed facial flattery, phone the Beauty Dept., LIBerty 4000, daily except Sunday, or write me, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

What Makes Girl Popular?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IF I KNEW the sure-fire answer to the question of just what makes a girl popular; how it is that some girls have more dates than they can manage while others sit home night after night, and why certain ones are peppered with proposals and certain other ones never get the chance to say either "Yes," or "No," I'd certainly make myself a fortune as a matrimonial consultant.

I'd be able to steer such a girl as the following letter describes straight toward the husband for whom she's longing.

This girl writes of herself:

"I'm 26 years old, and considered rather attractive by some of my friends. I have been in love and engaged three times, and three times my heart has been broken. I had to break the engagements because each time the boy fell in love with some other girl and married her.

"Now I have a few admirers, but no special one. I like most sports, and belong to a church club. But like all girls, I want to settle down and have a home of my own. I go out on very few dates because the boys I've been out with, some way or another, let me know that they don't want a steady girl friend. Of course this hurts, but I never let them know. I have never been lucky with boys, even when I was in school. I'm not very popular, and never have much to say. I work in an office at a separation center."

Now while it's pretty difficult, as I've already suggested, to say just what enters into the tricky question of popularity, it's sometimes easier to put a finger on some of the things that may keep a girl from it.

And in this particular case I'm wondering if one trouble may be that the writer of this letter has unwittingly given the boys a feeling that she's pretty eager to get married.

And the second thing that occurs to me in diagnosing her difficulty is the handicap she mentions of never having much to say.

So here, taken right from her letter, are two things on which she can go to work immediately to better her situation. And let's put them this way: In the first place, she shows (or may show) too much interest in men. In the second place, she doesn't show enough interest in other people and other things. And it's the second point on which she should concentrate, because if that's taken care of the first is very likely to take care of itself.

In other words, getting interested in lots of people and lots of things will not only give her plenty to talk about, it will make her less aware of any one group.

Let this girl, for the time being then, forget how much she'd like to get married, and start to develop herself along lines that will make her an interesting person. Let her join another group or so which has both men and women among its members—I'll bet that club she already belongs to is exclusively feminine!—and let her take up a hobby through which she will meet new people. If she's

Clothes Exploit Your Better Points

By EILEEN CALLAHAN

THE GREAT Ziegfeld was too canny a man to waste the beauty of a spectacular showgirl on a needle-and-thread job in the wardrobe department. When "the glorifer of American womanhood" found a lovely girl, he exploited her beauty to the fullest in the spotlight of his Follies

Some women could take a lesson from Ziegfeld in making the most of their own good points. In choosing clothes, a woman should first make an honest evaluation of her figure, its good points and its bad points. Having catalogued her assets, she should make a study of how to emphasize them.

If a tiny waistline is a woman's good feature, her dresses and suits should call attention to it. Particularly fine for the small, waisted figure are suits with slim, molded jackets; close-fitting skirt and blouse combinations; uncluttered dresses with long, lean torso look. The bulky, boxy jacket silhouette should be left for girls who don't want to call attention to their waistlines.

WHETHER you are a Judy or Jill you'll go big for these tiny spindle belts by Criterion which do torso tactics for the new middy silhouette. Since they come in bright gay football colors and in subtle, murky tones as well . . . rainbow them up the front or choose them all to match. They're three-eighths of an inch of cape or suede.—R. M.

ST. LOUIS, June 26—Prepared in the cool of the morning and served during the cool of the evening, a fragrant, inviting vegetable beef stew is a favorite. Tender biscuits in the shape of doughnuts — centers garnished with canned peas, adds both taste and eye appeal. Be sure to make enough for second servings; if some is left over, so much the better, for many think stew is enhanced by the blending of flavors and twice as good warmed over.

To save overheating the house in the evening, this hearty, satisfying meal is made ready ahead. Both the vegetable beef stew and baking powder biscuits can be prepared in the morning and put in a baking dish—ready for popping into the oven at the last minute for reheating.

VEGETABLE BEEF STEW

(From National Canners Ass'n)

Flour 2 lbs. beef chuck
2 cups boiling water
10 whole peppers (black)
2 bay leaves 2 tbsp. salt
1 cup diced celery
6 medium sized potatoes
1 No. 2 can carrots
1 No. 2 can peas
8 small onions Biscuit dough

Fry out some of the beef fat in a heavy kettle. Cut the meat in 2-inch cubes and dredge heavily in flour; add to the fat and cook until browned (an onion may be diced and browned with the meat, if desired). Add water, spices, salt and celery; cover and simmer gently until tender (about an hour). Remove the bay leaves. Pare the potatoes and cut into quarters; add with the peeled onions to the meat. Cook about 20 minutes. Add canned vegetables (except ½ cup peas) with the liquid from them and continue to simmer about 10 minutes. Pour the stew into a baking dish and place baked doughnut shaped biscuits on top, fill the centers with peas. Serve hot. Makes 8 generous servings.

Note: Make enough biscuit dough so that half can be used for regular baking powder biscuits, and the other half for the top of the stew. For the doughnut shaped biscuits, roll the dough lightly ¼-inch thick. Cut into doughnut rings and bake as usual.

Add to your menu plan—blueberry tarts. They can be made in the morning and cooled in the refrigerator. The popularity of blueberry tarts isn't news, but it is good news to learn that canned blueberries are back again after being scarce for home folks for a number of years.

BLUEBERRY TARTS

(From National Canners Ass'n)

1 No. 2 can water pack blueberries
⅓ cup sugar ½ tsp. salt.
2 tbsp. cornstarch
2 tbsp. butter or margarine
6 baked tart shells

Drain the liquid from the blueberries and heat to boiling. Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt. Sift into the boiling liquid and cook until thick and clear, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add butter and berries. Cool and pour into tart shells. Makes 6 tarts. May be served plain or with whipped cream.

Note: If syrup pack blueberries are used reduce the sugar to ¼ cup.

Meat Rationing Urged on Truman

WASHINGTON, June 26 (AP)—Senator Flanders, (R.) of Vermont, suggested today that President Truman urge voluntary meat rationing to help check what the lawmaker called a "really serious" living cost spiral.

The Vermont senator told a reporter that flood damage to the midwest corn crop apparently has smashed hopes that food prices might turn downward soon. Instead, he said, they almost certainly will go up.

Flanders is a member of the joint Congressional committee on the economic report which is studying proposals on how to keep the American economy on an even keel.

Jap M.D. 'Sorry,' Strangled Yanks

GUAM, June 26 (AP)—A Japanese navy doctor who took notes as 10 American war prisoners died in the agonies of medical tests on Truk island described their terrible sufferings at the murder trial of 19 Japanese today.

Surgeon Lt. Shigioshi Makamura related how two victims, whose feet hung in shreds after being dynamited while tied to stakes, were strangled because the doctor performing the experiments "felt sorry for them."

Nakamura told a U. S. military commission the orders to use eight prisoners as human guinea pigs were given by the principal defendant, Capt. Hiroshi Iwanami, who commanded the naval hospital on Truk.

When tourniquets on two Americans were released after eight hours, the witness testified, "the prisoners shook in terrible pain. Their faces turned green and they died in ten minutes."

SLOPER DENIED POWER

Patricia Speaks: Something About Baseball Wives

By AUSTEN LAKE

I DON'T EXPECT YOU TO SNORT "Gosh" or "Jeepers" about this. But this pillar of persiflage has received a penny postcard in the Spencerian script of Mrs. J. H. Dean, the lucid half of the Dizzy Deans and a personable female on the buxom side who treats her pixilated spouse like a fond mamma. She was in Boston with Diz during the last visitation of the St. Louis Browns. So she writes: "Jerome and I enjoyed your article after our pleasant visit to Boston."

Here is, or rather was, baseball's leading lady and the raison d'etre (Phew!) for her gusty helpmeet's climb to fame both as a wealthy pitcher and lately as a radiorator. She arranges Diz's radio contracts, signs the checks, dictates the family correspondence, acts as a travelling chaperon and controls him like a shrewd parent indulging a talented but erratic child. "Poor Jerome," she'll say, for she never calls him Dizzy, "is such an artless, generous, big-hearted boy."

IT HAS BEEN SOME YEARS since I last visited the Deans at their St. Louis home. But there was a two-foot poster photo of the celebrated man on top of a grand piano, with Diz smirking from a silver frame—the sort of thing you usually associate with the lobbies of a moving picture palace. Through the dining-room portieres I glimpsed a full length enlargement of Diz in his old Cardinal uniform hanging on the wall. There may have been a half a dozen others around the apartment.

Make no mistake, the business brains of the Dean household is pretty, plump Patricia, a lady who learned about male psychology as a hosiery saleswoman in Dallas.

Diz, for all his gab and flow of hill-billy forensics on the radio, is just a tremulous echo of Mrs. Dean's robust contralto. For hers is the same wifely cupidity and maternal ambition by which Mrs. Babe Ruth turned Babe from a strictly denim guy who wore yellow nobs on his shoes and flannel undershirts into a sartorial model and encouraged him to yell for the federal bank balance during his ripe years with the Yankees.

Perhaps such tactics might have ruined a lessser balanced household. But Dizzy revels in it, implying the same docile worship in his eyes and attitude as a sheep dog blessing a benevolent mistress after feeding him pork chops. Indeed, if Diz wore a tail at the end of his spine, he would wag that fuzzy plume bald by fanning messages to his Mrs. It's truly touching!

When Dizzy joined the Cardinals as a bachelor in 1932, he was a rustic hayshaker with a fund of raw pitching power and a goofy nature which made him a quick favorite with the word painters of the press. But he was also a cantankerous cuss who gnawed his nails and petted his moods, so that his first boss, old Gabby Street, once told me he never presumed to criticize him or speak a cross word lest Diz swoon in a seven-day pout.

The "Lollypop Kid," Gabby called him because of his sweet tooth for praise.

Life was full of troubles of his own making and began when Frank Frisch, a brusque and brittle type, replaced Street and started blistering Dizzy's sensitive soul with acid remarks. For Frisch regarded psychology as something effeminate like wearing silk underwear and he poured his doses for one and all from the same bitter bottle—a good mouthful of homeopathic profanity which curled Diz's tender cuticle.

SO DEAN WAS FAST GROWING spiritless and not even his defensive blusterings could plug the steady leak of his confidence as it trickled through his pores. He was 185 pounds of pout when Heaven sent him a suitable wife—a perky, sharp-eyed girl with a motherly manner mixed with a go-get-'em style of sales talk. It must have been an interesting courtship.

The cure was instant and permanent! Overnight the girth of Diz's chest swelled four inches. His round-shouldered slouch turned to a swaggger. He jutted his jaw out of his collar and, like Mary's little lamb, everywhere that Dizzy went his wife was sure to follow. She still does! Not hen-pecked, mind you! But simply that he thrives on her syrup. So Dizzy became a loud "WE" instead of a faltering "me."

His earned run averages became "our" earned run average in the domestic conversations and the wifely chatter referred to his strikeout strings as a mutual possession, which considering the happy relationship they were. Just as today Diz's quaint radio idioms are in full partnership. Patricia resurrected Dizzy from dereliction and, according to marine law, deserves all salvage rights.

Thus, since marrying a manager who is both useful and ornamental Dizzy became one of baseball's habitual holdouts until an ache crept into his elbow—an affliction which Branch Rickey, the pious sour puss, once called "matrimonial convulsions." For, if they could do it lawfully, the ball magnates would outlaw double-blessedness as a pernicious nuisance which transforms tractable bachelors into greedy husbands and causes the owner to contract heavy pain in the region of the bankrolls. 'Twixt the players' wives and the magnates there is usually a deep-seated enmity. As Diz once remarked: "Nuthin' gives a guy moxie like marriage."

So I suggest to Mr. Robert Murphy, the Boston labor lawyer who tried to scare the baseball magnates into organized submission last year, that all he needs to do is unionize the baseball wives. They'd fix 'em!

Tex Hughson Out for Season; Red Sox Pennant Hopes Fade

By HERB FINNEGAN

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26—Cecil "Tex" Hughson's arm has gone completely dead and the ace right-hander of the Red Sox pitching staff will be lost to the club for the remainder of the season.

This was learned exclusively here today as the big twirler, considered by many experts to be the greatest pitcher in the American League, left the club to visit Dr. James Bennett at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., for further medical examination.

And with this news the hopes of the Red Sox to repeat for the pennant flew out the window! Hughson, joining southpaw Mickey Harris on Dr. Bennett's list of patients, was the "stopper" on the staff; the No. 1 member of the Big Four (Harris, Dave Ferriss and Joe Dobson) who twirled the Hub club to the flag last season.

Hughson had pitched yesterday against the Detroit Tigers in the doubleheader at Fenway Park. It was his 14th start of the season but, as in the case of 8 previous occasions, he was shelled from the mound, lasting only four innings. He has a won-lost record of 4-7 for the year with a 1-0 triumph over the Yankee as his only creditable showing.

From the earliest days of spring training, Hughson had complained of a "cold finger." In spite of this, he continued to take his turn on the mound with the result that the limb became worse insead of better.

Talking over the situation with Dr. Mal Stevens in New York recently, the Yankee medical man stated that such a condition was deeper than a finger; that it probably went as deep as the elbow. On his word, this new development cannot be classified as a complete surprise.

On the recent road trip before the Red Sox returned home, Hughson had visited Dr. Robert Hyland in St. Louis while the club was there (June 3, 4). At that time, the arm was in such a poor condition that Dr. Hyland kept the reports away from Hughson but he did tell Manager Joe Cronin of his findings.

Hughson, a native of Kyle, Texas, joined the Sox in 1941, late in the season, but he managed to chalk up a record of 5 victories against 3 defeats. The following season, he fireballed his way to a 22-6 mark, topping the leagues. In 1943, he turned in a 12-15 mark and in '44, he was well on his way to his greatest mark (18-5) when he joined the Army. He reported back to the Sox fold this season.

He's a graduate of Texas U.

Yankees Continue To Make Advances In Wimbledon Play

LONDON, June 26 (AP)—Jack Kramer of Los Angeles, seeded No. 1 to add the Wimbledon title to his collection, easily defeated Gianni Cucelli of Italy, 6—0, 6—2, 6—0, to advance to the fourth round of the all-England tennis meet today.

The American was at his best in the second set although that was the only one in which he lost a game. He closed that canto by ripping off five straight points.

John Bromwich and Geoff Brown, both members of the Australian Davis Cup team, advanced to the fourth round ahead of Kramer.

Margaret Osborne of San Francisco and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Cal., the defending women's doubles champions, moved handily into the third round by humbling Susy Kormoczy and Mrs. W. H. Peterdy of Hungary, 6—1, 6—2.

Torsten Johansson, Swedish Davis Cupper, who won his two previous matches without dropping a game, had trouble with Josef Asboth of Hungary before he managed to come out on top, 8—6, 5—7, 6—2, 6—2.

Hans Redl, the one-armed Australian player, bounced into the fourth round with a 1—6, 6—3, 7—5, 0—6, 6—3 win over Britain's D. H. Slack.

Tom Brown of San Francisco, seeded third and a semifinalist last year defeated Medley Baxter of Britain but needed four sets to do it by scores of 6-2, 6-2, 10-12, 6-4.

Defending Champion Yvon Petra of France, seeded seventh, turned in a straight set triumph over Dilip Bose of India, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Pierre Pellizza of France also reached the fourth round, defeating Britain's Murray Deloford, former RAF flight lieutenant, 5-7, 9-7, 6-3, 6-3.

Doyle Another Martyr To Official Negligence

By DAN PARKER

ONE QUESTION that suggest itself as a result of Tuesday night's ill-fated welterweight title bout in Cleveland is:

In view of the head injury Jimmy Doyle suffered in the same ring a year ago last March when he was knocked out by Artie Levine and incapacitated for almost nine months, should he have been passed on by the Cleveland boxing commission's physician or by the commission itself as a suitable opponent for Ray Robinson in a championship match?

Jimmy Doyle's condition had been known to the boxing world ever since his first brush with death in Cleveland, 15 months ago. It was because of this that the 20th Century Club, to give the devil his due, refused to book him into the St. Nicholas Arena not long ago.

If anyone should know about Doyle, Andrew J. Putka, chairman of the Cleveland Boxing Commission, should. But Putka waited until Doyle suffered another and this time fatal cerebral injury before announcing (with abominable taste) that the boy would be barred from ever again boxing in Cleveland.

Too bad someone with the voice of authority didn't speak up against this mismatch in time to save Jimmy's life.

Doyle fought twice in New York while under suspension here, which shows how lax the official supervision is in such matters. Jimmy had been set down at the request of the Cleveland commission until he produced X-rays to prove that his head injuries had cleared up.

Not until he had fought twice, however, did the commission catch up to the situation and order the X-ray photos taken.

Occasionally, boxing commissioners such as John Hall of New Jersey, soon to be replaced, and John Montgomery of Pittsburgh, will refuse to sanction a one-sided match. Montgomery only Tuesday threw out the Lee Q. Murray-Cyclone Williams bout booked for Friday night in Erie, Pa., on the ground that Williams wasn't a suitable opponent for Lee Q. and, oddly enough, Murray's manager, Jimmy Brown, agreed with him.

But, for the most part, commissioners use the rubber stamp on any match that is submitted to them for approval. It isn't so long ago that the English papers quoted our own Eddie Eagan, at ringside after the Baksi-Woodcock bout, as overruling Baksi's opinion that he wasn't fit to fight Joe Louis. Who would be the better judge of that—Eddie or Baksi?

And what will be the determining factor on the tentative Louis-Baksi bout for September?

SUD CHANDLER of the Yanks went to the Garden last Friday night with a friend who knows his way around the fight racket. Before the main bout, Spud expressed a desire to visit Tippy Larkin in his dressing room, and his wish was accepted as a command.

"This is Spud Chandler," said his friend, who has known Tippy for a long time.

"How are you?" asked Tippy politely as he sat in his dressing room, waiting for the order to march to the gallows.

Spud said he felt just dandy, sure enough.

Then the conversation struck a snag. Finding the silence a bit awkward, Tippy finally asked: "What line of business are you in, Mister?"

The friend, frightfully embarrassed, said: "Tippy, you've haerd of Spud Chandler, the pitcher?"

"Oh, baseball," he said, his mind obviously far away from the dressing room.

Now there was a really awkward hiatus but once more Tippy, the perfect host, came to the rescue.

"Are you still working at it?" he asked.

This time it was Spud who saved the day. Remembering that it was his turn to pitch on the morrow, he replied gracefully: "Tippy, that I couldn't tell you until after Saturday's game. If I'm not knocked out, I'm still working, I guess."

P. S.—Chandler wasn't knocked out Saturday afternoon but Tippy was, about half an hour after Spud bade him good evening and good luck.

SUSPEND JOCKEY

NEW YORK, June 26 (AP)—Apprentice Jockey Joe Sneller has drawn a 10-day suspension from the Empire City stewards for rough riding astride Tick Tack in Tuesday's final race at Jamaica. The suspension takes effect today.

Joe Dobson, 8-3, Opposes Bobo Newsom, 3-5, In Arc Light Game At Washington Tonight

By HERB FINNEGAN

WASHINGTON, June 26—First in war, first in peace and last in the American League. So sang Homer as he smote his bloomin' lyre in the drear yesteryear. Washington's not doing much better today. They're seventh in the American League, yet the Red Sox haven't been able to lick them here—yet.

They'll get their fourth chance of the season tonight when Joe Dobson (8-3) toes the rubber against Bobo Newsom (3-5). They will play single games tomorrow and Saturday before returning home to face their bitterest rivals, the Yanks, in a Monday moonlight sail.

They were in happy spirits this morning as they detrained at Union Station. They had won 9, lost 3 at home against the western clubs, which included their mid-week split with Detroit (2-4, 4-3). That's better than the usual .667 ball they played previously at Fenway.

Now they're determined to surpass the .484 gait they've maintained on the road to date—15 won, 16 lost. They've got to do it if they're going to catch the Yanks, and now that Denny Galehouse promises to lighten the pitching load and Dave Ferriss seems to be himself again, they have a chance.

Ferriss faced Dizzy Trout in the final game at Fenway after Tex Hughson dropped a 4-2 decision to Hal Newhouser in the first game.

He was unsteady in the first inning. A hit and two walks gave Detroit a run. He hadn't finished one of his last four starts, and Mel Parnell started to warm up in the bull pen. He faced only 10 batters in the next three innings, but in the fourth Cullenbine homered with Trout aboard.

Thanks largely to his own bat, Ferriss still had a 4-3 lead, so Cronin let him stay in. He made Cronin happy when he faced only 13 batters in the last four innings, not one man reaching second. He allowed only six hits as he notched his seventh victory, despite all the running he did on the bases.

Yet he'd never have won it if he hadn't been hitting as he did in '45. In the second inning, his single drove in Jones and Partee to give the Sox their third and fourth runs, and that was all Ferriss needed. Lucky he had that lead because Trout gave only one hit (double by Ferriss) in the last six innings and retired the last 14 men in a row.

Ferriss now is above the .300 mark at bat and he's driven in more runs than Gutteridge or Tebbetts who play quite regularly. No wonder Cronin was thinking of using him at first base in York's last days with the Sox. But since Jones arrived, Ferriss can tend to his pitching—and hitting. Jones is doing all right at first.

The 6-3 Louisianan not only has hit safely in 12 straight games (11 with the Sox) but he's had 13 RBI in those 11 games and has hit at a .296 clip. Of the 13 hits he's made since coming to Boston, three have been home runs, three doubles and one a triple. He may be weak in the singles department, as they quip, but he's doing a whole lot better than even Cronin expected.

"I knew he'd give us that long hit occasionally," Cronin confesesd. "I also knew he'd look bad on certain pitches, but at least he's proved he can hit the soft stuff. They said he couldn't. But the thing that's surprised me most was his elasticity in the stretch department. He saved Pesky and Gutteridge several errors in those late games at home."

Jones will look bad in the field and at bat now and then. But he's had less than a year of big league experience, and he should keep improving, whereas you knew York would keep slipping.

Lynn, Nashua Open Up Big Lead in N.E. Loop

(AP)—The Dodgers of Nashua and the Red Sox of Lynn are fast drawing away from the field in the New England League. The two teams are tied for the leadership in the Class B circuit, seven and a half games ahead of third place Lawrence.

Nashua pulled into a tie last night by whipping the Portland Pilots 7-2 while the Sox were idled by rain at Providence.

Also rained out was a double-header between the fourth place Manchester Giants and the Millionaires at Lawrence.

The Pawtucket Slaters, in last place two percentage points in back of Portland, split a double-header with the fifth spot Indians at Fall River.

Two doubleheaders, Lynn at Providence and Lawrence at Manchester, and tonight's schedule as are six games between Fall River and Pawtucket at the latter city and Portland and Nashua at Nashua.

CORONER SAMUEL R. GERBER QUESTIONS RAY (SUGAR) ROBINSON
Stenographer Sits in at Start of Probe in Boxing Death of Jimmy Doyle
Associated Press Wirephoto

Coroner Says Robinson 'Evasive'

CLEVELAND, June 26 (INS)—Coroner Samuel R. Gerber reported today that welterweight champion Ray Robinson's blow to the head was the cause of the brain injury which took the life of Jimmy Doyle.

Dr. Gerber, who questioned Robinson last night, charged the champion with being "evasive" as he began a full-scale probe into the ring-death of the 22-year-old Los Angeles fighter.

Doyle died in St. Vincent's Charity Hospital yesterday, a little less than 18 hours after he was carried out on a stretcher from the ring at the Cleveland Arena. Doyle, whose real name was James J. Delaney, never regained consciousness.

Coroner Gerber also charged that a great deal of "unholy pressure" was being put on him to divert the investigation. He would not, however, reveal the identity of those whom he claimed were "pressuring" him.

Robinson was called to the coroner's office shortly after Doyle's death. Dr. Gerber asked him if he had the bout postponed twice because he had learned Doyle was not in "proper shape" to fight. Robinson said the postponements were caused because of eye injuries he had suffered in a bout with Georgie Abrams in New York a short time ago.

"Did you notice during the fight that Doyle's right eye kept dropping?" the coroner asked. He explained that such a dropping would indicate partial paralysis from an old injury.

"I was too busy fighting to notice," Robinson replied.

"Well, did you notice that Doyle was in trouble at any time?" the coroner continued.

"Getting him in trouble is my business as a boxer and a champion," Robinson countered.

Dr. Gerber conducted an autopsy on Doyle's body and issued the following statement:

"Doyle died from a cerebral hemorrhage. There was a general hemorrhage in the brain, considerable in the back of the brain known as pons. There was concussion also.

"His head striking the ring floor may have added to the damage. But the blow to the jaw or face was the cause of the injury to the brain.

"The evidence of old brain injuries are there."

Doyle was knocked unconscious in the same Cleveland ring March 11, 1946, by middleweight Artie Levine. He was out of ring action for nine months and had fought four fights prior to his title bout with Robinson Tuesday night.

Doyle's death, first ever to result from a modern championship battle, was the first in Cleveland since Luke Ginley died from injuries received in a bout with Jimmy Berry April 19, 1917.

Robinson told the coroner he would remain in Cleveland to be available for further questioning. He said he would sign a transcript today of the questioning, which was not conducted under oath.

Doyle's brother, Eddie Delaney, arrived in Cleveland early today to take charge of funeral arrangements.

Commission Reports Jimmy Doyle Was Fit

CLEVELAND, June 26 (AP)—The Cleveland Boxing Commission reported today that Jimmy Doyle was physically fit and ready when he entered the ring against Ray Robinson in the welterweight championship bout that resulted in Doyle's death.

The report was prepared at the request of Mayor Thomas Burke at a special meeting called by Commission Chairman Andrew Putka.

Dr. A. F. Hagedorn, commission physician, gave his own testimony and that of other physicians that the 22-year-old Californian showed no injury of any kind before he entered the ring with Robinson.

He reported he would question Paul Doyle, manager of the late boxer, today and matchmaker Larry Atkins and Dr. Hagedorn Saturday.

Teen-Aged Anglers Show Way to Experts

By "TAP" GOODENOUGH

Battling bass are still invading the waters around Martha's Vineyard, following fast fishing during last weekend. Showing the way to experts have been two teen-aged youths, 14-year-old Edward Bernard and 13-year-old Matthew Poole, both local lads. On his first angling venture, Ed landed a 13-pound striper from Anthias Bridge, while Matty surprised old-timers at Menemsha Opening by beaching ten fish, ranging up to 20 pounds, using a popping plug.

Simeon Pinkham, well-known police chief of Vineyard Haven, decided to try his luck with Walter Scott, another islander, the two anglers taking six specimens at Anthias Bridge, a 20-pounder tops for the day.

It was Scott, however, who had the most exciting experience, surf casting from the rolling shore at Squibnocket. This sportsman tied into a big bass, only to have his reel break, so he handlined his catch, finally beaching it. Two more large fish proceeded to snap his 45-pound test nylon line; hence, he utilized the above method successfully, without losing a fish.

Speaking of stripers, there are plenty of this species in the vicinity of Cuttyhunk Island, according to John Peterson, operator of the Cape Codder Hotel, at Falmouth. Accompanied by Isaiah Tilton, famed guide and fisherman of Cuttyhunk, Peterson visited Cuttyhunk recently, spotting numerous schools. He failed to get a strike, although Tilton — who knows how and where to hook 'em—has already boated some this season.

ANGLING ANGLES: "Business is starting to pick up in the Canal," says Charley Sherer, co-owner of the Buzzards Bay Red Top Bait Ct. His partner, Bill Chase, Jr., hit four striped bass there Wednesday morning, snaring three on eelskins, the other with an Atom plug . . . His catches weighed from nine to 15 pounds . . . Another angler took no less than 12 stripers from the Canal

Sain, F. McCormick Braves' Stars on Western Trip

By BILL GRIMES

NEW YORK, June 26 — Two weeks ago today, when they started their second trip through the west, the Braves were in fourth place, one and a half games behind the pace-making Giants. Today they returned last in first place. And, tonight, they'll go all out at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, to increase their lead over the Dodgers.

The Braves played ten games in the west. They took three straight from the Pirates, broke even with the Reds 1-1, won two out of three from the Cubs, and split a two-game series with the Cards, 7-3 record, a terrific pace for a road trip.

Johnny Sain was the big gun of the pitchers in the trip. After opening up with a 12-3 win over the Pirates, John stopped the Cubs twice in as many days. On his regular turn, he beat the Bruins 5-1. Then he came back as a relief hurler the next day when old Si Johnson, who had taken over for the tiring Bill Voiselle, began to falter. He was greeted with a blooping single by Dominic Dallesandro, which knotted the count and then Clyde McCullough beat out a bunt, when big John fell trying to field the ball. But with the winning run on second base and no one out, he proved conclusively that he's got what it takes when the chips are down. He retired the next three Cubs on an infield pop up, a foul and a strikeout.

After Dick Culler's Texas leaguer had scored Phil Masi in the 11th, Sain went to work on Don Johnson, Eddie Waitkus and "Peanuts" Lowery and got them in one-two-three order, without a ball being hit out of the infield.

Warren Spahn annexed his 10th and 11th victories in the west. He wasn't as impressive as Sain, serving up three home run balls in Pittsburgh and three more in St. Louis. In fact, although they were held to 8 hits, the Cards hit Spahn hard enough to have beaten him.

Red Barrett broke even. He beat the Pirates and the Reds for his fourth and fifth straight wins but he was injected into that terrible affair in Chicago and blew one to the Cubs. Then the Cardinals jumped on him and had pushed five runs across the plate before he had anyone out in the 3d frame.

Although some of the so-called stars fell down badly, the Braves, as a team, hit exceptionally well. As was to be expected, Bob Elliott topped the regulars with a mark of .378, and Bama Rowell was the runner-up. "Old Bama" belted the pill for a cool .345.

Elliott connected with 14 hits and batted in 11 runs, while Rowell hit safely 12 times and boosted his RBI seven.

Big Frank McCormick, while alternating with Earl Torgeson at first base, played a star role in the west. In 24 times at bat, he made nine hits for a .375 average and batted in eight runs. It was his "clutch" homer in the 9th of the final game in Chicago that set the stage for the Braves to go on and win in the 11th. Then he doubled home three runs in the 9th inning of the second game in St. Louis.

How the Braves hit in the west:

| | AB | H | AVG. | RBI |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Litwhiler | 5 | 1 | .025 | 2 |
| Cannelli | 7 | 2 | .429 | 0 |
| Fernandes | 7 | 3 | .429 | 2 |
| M. McCormick | 7 | 3 | .429 | 3 |
| Elliott | 37 | 14 | .378 | 11 |
| F. McCormick | 24 | 9 | .375 | 8 |
| Rowell | 35 | 12 | .343 | 7 |
| Stutt | 21 | 7 | .333 | 0 |
| Ryan | 41 | 12 | .293 | 4 |
| Masi | 31 | 9 | .290 | 0 |
| Holmes | 42 | 11 | .262 | 3 |
| Hopp | 34 | 6 | .176 | 2 |
| Culler | 17 | 3 | .176 | 0 |
| Torgeson | 18 | 2 | .111 | 0 |

Lynn Next Stop in Sandlot Parade

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

The Hearst sandlot baseball tryouts which passed another mile post today at Nashua, N. H., moves onto Fraser Field, Lynn, Saturday.

The Lynn tryouts will be held at 9 o'clock in the morning. This early starting time will give CYO athletes plenty of time to compete in the morning, then take the short hop to Brookline for the annual CYO track meet in the afternoon.

Lynn is a fine baseball town. Last year close to 300 boys greeted "Pip" Kennedy at the Park.

Mike Ryba, current manager of the Lynn Red Sox, will act as a magnet for the younger ball players. All of these sandlotters know that Mike is one of baseball's most talented and popular managers.

Just before the Boston Red Sox left on their short road trip yesterday, Mgr. Joe Cronin chatted with this writer about the New England sandlot championship game which will be played at Fenway Park, July 29.

"I have talked with Lou Boudreau and he will work with Claude Davidson, Bill Barrett and myself in the selection of the two N. E. players to make the trip to New York for the Hearst National final," Cronin said.

Three ball players will be selected from the Lynn tryouts to compete in the N. E. final.

This year's final will be played as a co-feature with a Red Sox-Cleveland Indians game.

The boys must be over 15 and under 19 years of age to be eligible to compete in any of these ten New England baseball tryouts. There is no entry fee.

Future locations of Hearst sandlot tryouts are: Somerville, Boston, Brockton, Fall River and Pawtucket.

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY"
Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.
